MIDAS TOUCH

Crystals of Borazon Type II cubic boron nitride, a new manufactured material more precious than gold, are carefully measured on a sensitive scale at General Electric's Specialty Materials Department, Warrenton, Ohio. Positioned by high pressure and temperature techniques, Borazon possesses diamond-like qualities which make it highly effective as an abrasive for grinding hardened tool steels. Although at $340 an ounce it is presently one of the world's most expensive industrial abrasives, GE expects it will enable metalworking industries to reduce the cost of grinding and finishing many super-hard materials by up to one-third. The small amount of Borazon on the scale has a value of about $800.
