

NEW Releases Vets Outreach Funds

impulsion by an amount from the Veterans' Fund.

The federal government, by Congress, allowed for payments of $100 per veteran with an additional $50 for each dependent in residential programs. Application funds were limited to $200 of the nation's institutions of higher learning. They were reduced by 100 and 100 were installed in 1978. The total demand, based on the $500 per veteran figure, totaled more than $200 million. After adjusting the $20 million available against the demand, approved institutions were determined to receive 17.5 cents on the dollar.

Donald Deppa, head of the Veterans' Program Unit at the U.S. Office of Education, indicated that the staffers of these Veterans Outreach Offices will most likely be recent Viet Nam era veterans themselves. It is hoped that in this manner they will be able to reach out into the community to recruit their contemporaries. Special emphasis will be placed on the recruitment of those with little or inadequate education who never did well at high school and are convinced that they have little to gain by using their GI Bill benefits. Deppa stated that the success of the program depended on the enthusiasm of the staffers.

The U.S. House of Representatives Appropriations Committee, in working up the budget for fiscal 1978, has proposed the same level in funding, $25 million, for the program. Sen. Jacob Javits (D-New York), has proposed an amendment to the Education of the Handicapped Act which would enable any college or university with a ten percent veteran population to receive money under that Act. As the program expands, more colleges applying for the same amount of money will mean a decrease in funds for some schools which may result in the closing of some programs.

already begun. It is hoped that the results of the work of the program will encourage Congress to increase the appropriation. Mrs. Deppa stated that the program may receive additional funding with additional funds from

Diabetes 8th Leading Cause Of Death In NC

North Carolina ranked sixth in the nation in the total number of persons screened for diabetes in 1978, according to J. Edgar Criswell, Diabetes Program Manager, Chronic Disease Section, Division of Health Services.

Over 23,422 people were screened in local health departments and many screening clinics. Another 15,000 were tested in multiphasic screening clinics.

Of the total number tested, 1,484 were referred to doctors as diabetes suspects. Over 376 persons were found to be diabetics, and 103 were diagnosed borderline.

Local health departments did most of the screening, testing and referring to private doctors through ongoing clinics.

Diabetes clinics were conducted in cooperation with local medical societies, health departments, Lion Clubs, and diabetes associations. Clinics were held in High Point, Kenansville, Wilmington, Statesville, and Asheville and screened 5,230 people.

Diabetes was the eighth leading cause of death in North Carolina in 1977, and the second leading cause of blindness. Heart attacks occur two and one-half times more frequently in diabetics. It is estimated that one percent of North Carolina's population has diabetes, and that another 40,000 have the disease and don't know it.

The test for diabetes is simple and relatively painless. A drop or two of capillary blood is taken by means of a slight prick of the finger. The blood is mixed with a sodium fluoride solution which acts as a preservative until the specimen can be mailed to the biochemistry branch of the Division of Health Services in Raleigh for analyzing. A blood specimen must be analyzed within 72 hours from the time it is taken.

Any person who has screened 140 milligrams percent or greater is recommended to have the test repeated two hours after a meal. Another ten Division of Health Services over the county health departments diagnosed, they play an as a referral service to the private doctor.

It has been demonstrated that diabetes is more common and hence found more readily in certain population groups which are often called "high risk groups," according to Dr. J. Grant, head of the Chronic Disease Branch.

"Age seems to be one of the foremost factors in influencing the appearance of clinical diabetes," Dr. Grant explained. "Studies have shown that blood glucose levels rise steadily with age. About 70 percent of all diabetics are over 45 years of age at the time of diagnosis; only four percent are children."

"Any individual with a family history of diabetes must be considered a potential diabetic. Nevertheless, it is advisable to screen those who do not know whether anyone in the family has a history of diabetes," Dr. Grant cautioned.

"There is a correlation between diabetes and obesity, but a direct relationship has not been proven. It is not entirely clear whether obesity is a cause of diabetes or an affect of the disease," she said.

The excess of females among known diabetics, together with the difficulties that are encountered in pregnancy among diabetic women, has also suggested a relationship between child bearing and diabetes.

Who develops diabetes? Dr. Grant suggests diabetes is most likely to be found among those who are over 40 years of age, obese, blood relatives of diabetics, mothers who have given birth to babies that weigh nine pounds or more at birth, and women who have shown carbohydrate intolerance during pregnancy.

Raynor-Jones Vows Spoken

Miss Patricia Ann Jones of Richlands, and Mr. Phillip-Dean Raynor of Beaufortville pledged their marriage vows, Sunday, July 29, in a four o'clock ceremony in the First Baptist Church in Richlands.

The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Wilbur Jones of Richlands and the parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Raynor of Beaufortville.

Rev. Norman Aycock officiated at the double ring service. Traditional wedding music was played by Kirk Lanier Nicholson, organist. Selections included the "Bridal Chorus" by Wagner, "Wedding March" by Mendelssohn and themes from "Romeo and Juliet" and "Love Story".

Mrs. Billy Smith, soloist, sang "More" and "The Wedding Prayer".

The church was decorated with standing baskets of white gladioli and chrysanthemums against a background of palms. Brass candelabra with white lighted tapers completed the setting for the service.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Larry Bryant Jones, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory silk organza and pearl re-embroidered alencon lace. The gown featured a sheer yoke, with victorian neckline and long calla point fitted sleeves. The bodice and sleeves featured motifs of re-embroidered alencon lace encrusted with crystals and seed pearls. The slightly gathered skirt flowed from an empire waistline and featured a wide border of matching lace and seed pearls around the hemline and around the attached chapel train. Traditional bridal buttons enhanced the back and sleeves of the gown.

The bride's full length mantilla of imported silk illusion was applied with re-embroidered alencon lace and was attached to a camelot cap of matching lace and seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses, carnations and lilies breath centered around a white orchid.

Attending the bride as matron of honor was Mrs. Owen Wilson Brown of Chingapin. Bridesmaids were Miss Laurie Mae Jones, and Miss Betty Sue Jones, sisters of the bride; Miss Dinna Franville of Richlands; Miss Glana Lynn Harshbarger of Wilmington; Miss Margaret Lillian Garrison and Miss Margaret Mary Lane of Greensboro.

Faison Native Appointed To Council

A Clinton insurance man has been appointed to the Small Business Administration's District Advisory Council.

Named to a two-year term on the SBA's Charlotte District advisory group was Deems H. Clifton, who is believed to be the first ever to serve in such a position from this area.

Charlotte Administrator Thomas Kleppe told Clifton that "with your help, we can make a significant contribution to the economic well-being of this nation."

The Small Business Administration, several decades old, was created to help small businesses and over $2.6 billion in financial aid has been provided since its founding.

SBA advisors assist the agency's staff in planning for current and proposed programs, particularly in the areas they represent, as well as acting as a channel of information to local business and commercial and investment interest regarding SBA programs.

Mr. Clifton is a native of Duplin County and was born in Faison. He is the son of the late William Deems and Cora Korngay Clifton.

Summer Orientation Held At Campbell

The first of two summer orientation programs for new students and their parents was held Monday and Tuesday at Campbell College. Some of the parents and all of the students stayed in college dormitory rooms Monday night.

About 100 parents came to the orientation program and asked many questions on every facet of college life. One hundred and sixty-five students were registered for this session. The second orientation program is scheduled for July 30-31.

The orientation sessions were tried last year as an experiment. Jerry F. Jackson, dean of students, said the success of last year's trial resulted in the continuation of the programs as a permanent part of the college schedule.

"The parents especially appreciate the chance to find out what their son or daughter will be facing when college starts this fall," Jackson said. The main purpose of the summer meetings, he said, is to have a relaxed situation for acquainting the incoming students with campus expectations and procedures and actually to pre-register them for their fall-term courses, avoiding the rush of the regular registration period.

Residence halls were set aside for the new students and for the parents who wished to stay at the college. About half of the parents stayed on campus for the night. They all could eat in the college dining halls if they wished. Nominal fees were assessed for these services.

Jackson said that the program was condensed and made more intensive this year. An extra feature was three seminars held at night on campus drug problems, on the college campus health problems and campus activities.

Separate programs were conducted for parents and students, with college personnel talking on college procedures, activities and facilities.
