Daily Bread

Bread may have been a daily supplement to meals in the 18th century, but in most households it wasn't baked daily. Day-old bread would have been a luxury, considering that the baking was only done once to last an entire week.

Pictured here are three utensils that were essential to some step of the bread-making process. The object that looks like two fraternity paddles strung together is actually a lard press. Lard was boiled and then poured into a clean flour sack through a strainer. The sack was twisted from the top down to squeeze out the lard. Just in case some was missed in the squeezing, the lard press sent over the sack once more to get every drop.

On the left is a 200-year-old bread tray. The tray is in such good condition it could almost be mistaken for one of today's popular reproductions. George Cowan of the Cowan Museum in Kenansville explained that the tray had been stored in a flour barrel unused for almost a hundred years.

The largest item in the picture is a dough box. This piece of machinery took at least half the work out of kneading bread. The dough was placed in the box and rolled flat. It was then rolled back into a ball by hand. The baker alternated in this fashion until the dough was sufficiently kneaded.

First Four-Year Class To Enter MOC

The first baccalaureate class of 1986 (approximately 400 students) will move on campus Sunday, Aug. 29 at Mount Olive College. Dormitories for new and returning students will open at 2 p.m.

An information meeting for parents will take place at 5 p.m. in Rodgers Chapel and a worship service for all students will be conducted at 7:30 p.m., also in the chapel.

The worship service will be conducted by the Rev. Frank Harrison, chaplain.

Also on Aug. 29, a groundbreaking ceremony for College Hall will be held at 4 p.m. This is the new athletic and convention center for the four-year program. The building is scheduled for construction this fall.

Orientation and registration for students who did not attend a summer orientation session will take place on Monday, Aug. 30 and Tuesday, Aug. 31. Classes will begin Sept. 1. Registration for classes not filled in the day curriculum will be open through Sept. 16. Further information on registration can be obtained by calling Nancy Sampsell, director of admissions, at 658-2502.

Night Classes Begin Sept. 9

There will be eight night courses offered beginning Thurs., Sept. 9 at 7 p.m. in the Henderson Building. All night classes will meet once a week for the fall semester on Monday or Thursday at 7 p.m. English composition, philosophy, N.C. history and pastoral ministry will be taught on Monday. Math, data processing, old testament and psychology will be on Thursdays. Registration for evening courses can be completed at the first class meeting. For more information, contact Dr. Opey Jeans at 658-2502. Registration for the evening courses not filled will remain open through Sept. 20. Evening courses may be applied toward either an associate or bachelor's degree at MOC.

Night Courses at Base
Other evening courses which may be applied toward either an associate or bachelor's degree are offered by MOC through an extension program on Seymour Johnson AFB in Goldsboro. The next semester on base begins Oct. 18. More information on the base extension program may be obtained by calling 734-8585.

Located in Wayne County, MOC is a fully-accredited, co-educational liberal arts college founded in 1951 by the N.C. State Convention of Original Free Will Baptists.

Beat The "One Line" Line-Up...
Put in a second line and keep everybody talking.

Having two phone lines in your home means that two people can call out at the same time. That's a smart idea for the household with talkative teenagers. And it's ideal for the professional person who must make or receive important calls at home. But best of all, this second line is inexpensive. Just call Carolina Telephone's business office for prices, and quit waiting for the phone. A convenient second line is the easy answer.

"It's for you."
