

Lester Moore Receives Certificate Of Appreciation

Lester Moore, project director of the Duplin County Work Experience program of Rose Hill has been awarded a certificate of appreciation as an outstanding North Carolinian signed by Gov. James B. Hunt for his work in the N.C. Employment and Training Council. Moore received the certificate from Natural Resources and Community Development deputy secretary Jim Summers at the last meeting of the council on Feb. 18 at the Jane S. McKimmon Center of the North Carolina State University in Raleigh.

Moore was cited for "significant contributions to the progress of North Carolina for exemplary service to the citizens of his community and state" by the Governor.

The Employment and Training Council, authorized under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), provided oversight to statewide employment and training programs designated to provide training and employment opportunities to the state's unemployed, underemployed and disadvantaged citizens. It was composed of representatives from business and labor, state agencies, educational institutions, employment and training organizations, local governments and special interest groups charged with advising the Governor on employment and training policies and programs.

A new council will be appointed by Hunt early next month to administer the Job Training Partnership Act, which will become effective Oct. 1, replacing CETA.
