

Duplin Board Approves High School Discipline Plan

An in-house suspension plan for Wallace-Rose Hill High School for the next school term was approved by the Duplin County Board of Commissioners last week.

The board approved spending $8,578 in uncommitted state funds for salaries for the project.

School administrators place students who otherwise would be suspended or kept after school for disciplinary problems in the in-school suspension programs. Student privileges are generally revoked and the students spend all their school time except class hours in a supervised location apart from other students.

Assistant Superintendent Alice Scott and truancy officer Jim Flowers said a similar program established at Warsaw Junior High School several years ago has proven effective. They said that simply keeping students after school created transportation problems.

The board took no action on the protest of county welfare Director Millie Brown that her current staff would be unable to cope with a new monthly four-page report that would be required from about 800 households in the county receiving food stamps.

She said a federal order requires that forms be filled out for all people with earned incomes, with five or more family members, who are elderly, blind or disabled. It will cost $300 in postage alone to mail out the forms, she said.

Wake and Mecklenburg counties have refused to use the forms. "There's no possible way we can handle it," Mrs. Brown said.

County Manager Ralph Cottle pointed out that the Social Services Department includes a quarter, or about 50, of the county's employees. Mrs. Brown said the department handles a budget of $10 million in federal, state and local funds, including about $3 million worth of food stamps.

Tax Supervisor Frank Moore reported that Sea-board Systems Railroad paid $4,026.60 to complete its 1980 property tax return. The railroad has sued the state over the annual valuations of its property, claiming it was over-taxed when owners of other property only face revaluations every eight years.

The last full payment the railroad made was $8,868 in 1980. Since then, it has paid $3,751 per year on its taxes until the courts determined the validity of the tax billings.

The courts ruled the railroad's value in the county for tax purposes in 1980 was 71.5 percent of its annual property valuation as set by the state Utilities Commission. If it had paid on the 100 percent annual valuation, its tax liability for 1980 would have been $9,366. Valuations for succeeding years will be determined in separate court actions.

Norman Sandlin Jr. was sworn in as the county's new tax collector.

The board appointed a commission to work on grants for restoration of the Kelly-Farrior House as a museum. The committee's members are commission Chairman W.J. Costin, school Superintendent L.S. Guy, school board Chairman Joe Swinson, County Manager Ralph Cottle, and the chairman of the Cowan Museum board, Lois Britt.

Rich Boyd was named an ex-officio member.

Edmisten Appreciation Day In Duplin

Gubernatorial candidate Rufus Edmisten will be honored Friday, July 15 at Rufus Edmisten Day in Duplin County.

Edmisten, attorney general since 1974, recently formally announced his candidacy for Governor in 1984.

Duplin County Edmisten campaign officials expressed delight in being able to schedule Rufus Edmisten Appreciation Day. "Attorney General Edmisten is a very dedicated and hard-working public official," a spokesman stated, "and we are extremely pleased that he has been able to arrange his busy schedule to allow us to express appreciation to him in this way. Edmisten has saved the taxpayers of N.C. thousands of dollars," he continued, "and this will give his many friends and supporters in the county an opportunity to come out and say 'Thank you.' Also, it will give others an opportunity to meet and visit with him."

A fund-raising reception will be held at 5 p.m. on Friday, July 15 in the home of Charles and Carolyn Ingram at 501 E. Hill Street in Warsaw.

An appreciation rally will be held at 7 p.m. the same day at Phillips Farms Warehouse located one mile west of Kenansville on Highway 24-50.

Tickets and information may be obtained by calling 296-1111 in Kenansville.
