Farm Leaders Meet In Raleigh

Farm leaders from throughout North Carolina, who were previously appointed to N.C. Farm Bureau Commodity Advisory committees, met in Raleigh Sept. 2 to begin the Farm Bureau policy development process, according to Jack Williams, president of the Duplin County Farm Bureau.

Committee members met for the purpose of raising areas of concern to be offered as suggested issues for discussion in the policy development process. Commodity committees include aquaculture, cotton, dairy, field crops, flue-cured tobacco, burley tobacco, forestry, fruits and vegetables, ornamentals and shrubs, livestock, peanuts and poultry. General committees include Natural and economic resources, law and order, and transportation.

Representing the local Farm Bureau were Jack Williams, Joe Williams, Jack Brinson and Cecil Kornegay. Williams said that after issues are surfaced and discussed by the committees, they are submitted to the individual counties for consideration by resolutions committees prior to the county annual meetings. He pointed out that the Raleigh meeting will begin at 10 a.m. with a report on the current agricultural situation and general problem areas that will be confronting agriculture in the future. Committees will later begin their individual discussions. Williams suggested that Farm Bureau members who have questions that need to be considered, or ideas that may solve current problems, bring them to the attention of local committee members.

"It is through this process," he emphasized, "that members can be assured that Farm Bureau at county, state and national levels will work for well-considered, carefully chosen objectives which the members themselves have initiated, studied and decided."
