

Three Sworn In As Warsaw Town Commissioners

Warsaw Commissioners Take Oath Of Office

Two newcomers and a veteran member have been sworn in to serve on the Warsaw Board of Commissioners.

The new members are Graham Hood, who won on a write-in election campaign, and James Junior Herring. Billy Kennedy was re-elected to the board.

The newly reconstituted board elected Walter Foster as mayor pro tem.

Following the swearing-in, the board heard but took no action on a request for the town to extend its sewer lines closer to the site where Duplin Retirement Village is being constructed. George Kornegay of Mount Olive represented the retirement center in making the request.

The center is being built near Warsaw Elementary School east of town. Extending the sewer lines to the area would cost about $9,500.

In other business, Cleveland E. Turner was awarded a contract to demolish the Gresham house at 512 N. Pine St. under a Housing and Urban Development rehabilitation program. The house had been severely damaged by fire and had been unoccupied for several years.

The board voted to increase the price of town automobile license tags from $1 to $3. The town sells 1,200 to 1,400 tags a year, according to Town Clerk Alfred Herring.

Car owners will continue to have a choice of windshield stickers or metal tags. In the past they have chosen stickers by a 4-1 margin.

The metal tags cost the town 57 cents each and the stickers 30 cents. Mayor Sam Godwin said the metal tags help to advertise the town.

A public hearing on annexation of property belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. West brought no opposition. The land, known locally as the old Barden property, is bordered by W.L. Hill Avenue on the north, Gum Street on the east, Dudley Street on the south and U.S. 117 on the

Financial Aid Work Shop At James Kenan High School

On Thursday, Jan. 5, at 7:30 p.m., the James Kenan High School guidance department will host a financial aid workshop for all seniors and their parents.

The workshop will be held in the cafeteria and feature Pat Cochran, assistant director of financial aid at UNC-Wilmington as guest speaker.

Financial aid is available to students wishing to further their education and Ms. Cochran will be explaining step-by-step how to apply for it.

Seniors interested in attending any school (4-year college, junior college, technical school, business school, nursing school, etc.) next year should plan to attend this meeting with their parents.
