Lenoir Community College News

A 400 percent jump in commercial graphics enrollment and more than doubling of classes in the data processing department at Lenoir Community College has pushed storage cabinets and other equipment into the halls to give more work space to students, Dean Joyce Cherry of the commercial education department has reported.

The data processing department, giving top priority to student work space, has moved all its storage cabinets into the hall. The work space is in constant use for writing and running of programs on the PRIME and PDP computers with students using BASIC, RPG, ASSEMBLER, DOBOL and FORTRAN languages. The decollator stays in the hall except when in actual use, Mrs. Cherry observed.

Due to a surge in enrollment from citizens throughout the community, an extensive evening program is being offered, requiring use of all rooms in the division from Monday through Thursday evenings, Mrs. Cherry emphasized. Starting Jan. 7, Saturday morning classes will be added to accommodate the demand for citizen computer interest, she added.

A dramatic jump in enrollment in graphics growth in commercial graphics this year has made present facilities and work space so crowded as to be uncomfortable and to complicate the teaching program for this department. Enrollment more than doubled over last year and is up some 400 percent over the past three years. Continued growth is expected.

The graphics department recently acquired a two-station Compugraphic MCS and is in need of individual light tables. The darkroom has been remodeled to provide dry and wet facilities. Department head Grady Dickerson said, "The outlook for employment in the field of graphics is almost 100 percent assured to the student who performs adequately in this program."

"We have state-of-the-art equipment and a really great faculty. Among our most pressing needs now, in order to do a super job of preparing students for vocations in the commercial education field, is more space as soon as it can be provided," Mrs. Cherry concluded.

Carrolls Foods Sells Broiler Facility Perdue Will Continue Full Operation

Carroll's Foods, Inc. of Warsaw has signed a letter of intent to sell their broiler production facility to Perdue Farms, Inc. of Salisbury, Md. The announcement was made jointly by F.J. "Sohny" Faison Jr., president of Carroll's Foods and Thomas R. Shelton, executive vice president and chief operating officer of Perdue.

Carroll's will sell its hatchery, feed mill and administrative offices in Sanford as well as a 35,000 sq. ft. broiler production plant in Robbins. In addition, Carroll's will sell all existing inventory including live poultry in the field. Perdue will assume the contracts of all Carroll's poultry growers.

Faison said the company plans to invest the proceeds from the sale in expansion of their swine and turkey operations in Duplin and Sampson counties. The actual sale agreement and transfer of assets is expected to take place before Feb. 15.

In making the announcement, Faison and Shelton emphasized that there will be no interruption of current Carroll's operations. "It will be business as usual for our employees, our growers and our customers," Faison stated. "Perdue management has assured us that they will continue to operate two shifts in the Robbins plant meeting the full requirements of our customers as well as those of N.G. Purvis Farms, for which we custom process 300,000 birds a week."

Carroll's presently grows approximately 5.5 million turkeys and 180,000 market hogs.
