Pro. I.B. Duffer

While all you diehards were watching the Skins get killed some two weeks ago, ole I.B. was sitting around with painful gout, thinking of some other way to follow up the top 10 players mentioned in this column. Just another way to create a little talk in-and-around Rockfish, Lakewood, Duplin and Longmeadow. While riding around Duplin's layout, I got to thinking about good shots, good putts, good this, and good that, so I've come up with this list of goodies.

It appears Wallace's Knott Teachey and Harry Carlton, both standout golfers playing out of Rockfish CC, have made a bet that may just be the talk of the town. Knott, of Golden Skillet fame, a bit rotund, became a major concern for Harry, chairman of the Duplin County Board of Health and an executive with Ralph Carlton's Insurance Agency. Knott was overweight and agreed to lose 30 pounds if Harry would grow a mustache. Outwardly, Harry was real encouraging, knowing and believing that while Knott would lose some weight, he would not shed the full 30 pounds. Now, Knott has done it and Harry must! Shortly you will see emerging under Harry's nose a new growth, a badge, so to speak, of his constant dedication to promote good health among the people by encouraging less fat and more lean. Even now Harry's index finger may be seen checking the growth which Knott rightly expects to reach handlebar size and density. For Harry, it is a time of concern as he experiments with something untried and new.

Along The Way

By Emily Kilette

The average taxpayer may often express thoughts of doing away with the present social services system. Today welfare programs which sprouted from the county homes of the early 1900s pump millions of dollars into the economy each year.

Despite taxpayers' dreams of ending the welfare system, the job of taking care of the disadvantaged members of society has rested with the government for more than 100 years. Aid to the handicapped was one of the first social services provided by the government and then assistance for the elderly. During the early 1900s homes were founded in each county to house the disadvantaged and orphans. Federal assistance was extended to the blind and elderly, which made up a great majority of the persons housed in county homes by the 1940s.

Duplin's county home was located in Kenansville where the Department of Transportation is today. The home, like other households, included tending farm animals and vegetable production by the residents who were physically able. When the homes were first established they ran with very little cost to the counties, but as the depression ended, fewer people required public assistance, making the homes more of a financial burden.

According to the January 28, 1943 issue of the DUPLIN TIMES, the Duplin County Board of Commissioners met in special session and voted to sell the local home. The facility was costing Duplin $4,000 a year to maintain and county welfare officials estimated only $2,000 would be needed annually to support the disadvantaged if they were lodged in private dwellings. The home housed nine individuals; the majority were elderly or handicapped. Individuals handicapped or elderly qualified for both county and federal support.

The welfare department of Duplin had found private dwellings for the nine residents of the county home and planned to pay each $25 per month in support. The closing of the home was expected to cut the cost of the county welfare system in half.

The home consisted of 58 acres of land and three buildings; totalled it was estimated to have a value of $5,000 to $7,500 at the time the county commissioners voted to sell the property. When the decision to sell became final, Dr. G.V. Gooding of the State Highway Department submitted an offer of $7,000 for the property. The offer was later accepted by the county. The highway department built a maintenance shop and garage on the site.

Proceeds from the sale of the county home were used toward reducing Duplin's debt. Many of the local people had wanted to use the money to build an addition to the agricultural building to provide more office space for the growing number of workers employed with the local rationing board. Members of the rationing board were uneasy about the crowded working conditions of their office located in the Dail building of Kenansville. The Board hoped to gain more office space in order to accommodate the rationing program when it came into effect.

Boyette Receives ECU Scholarship

Penelope Boyette of Pink Hill, senior student in the East Carolina University school of business, is the recipient of a $500 University Book Exchange Scholarship at ECU.

Her award, made to an outstanding student in the department of decision sciences, is one of several made each year from a program endowed by a local retailer.

Boyette is a 1980 graduate of East Duplin High School, where she graduated first in her class of 170. Before coming to ECU last January, she was a student at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Her memberships include Phi Sigma Pi and Phi Beta Lambda honor societies, campus computer organizations and the ECU teaching ef-
