IN ESTATE PLANNING,
THE ONLY THING WORSE THAN TOO LITTLE HELP IS TOO MUCH.

Estate planning used to be the province of only the very rich. Today, the person or family who can't benefit from such planning is the exception. And there are a lot of folks out there who would like to do it for you.

Some individuals will tell you they can handle it all. The small bank says it knows you best. The huge banks tempt you with the size of their trust departments and the number of warm bodies they have just waiting for your business.

Well, we're First Citizens Bank and we think that all of those options pose some problems to the North Carolinian looking for sound estate planning and management. For instance, estate planning today is a very complicated, very precise process. Settling an estate is even worse. Seldom, if ever, can even the most trusted individual handle it all on his own.

Small banks too often lack the depth in both experience and personnel to deliver maximum benefit and efficiency.

Big banks, on the other hand, have great quantities of both experience and personnel. But the very size of their operation often limits the kind of personal care and attention so very necessary to your financial well-being. It may not be a major concern to you now, but your heirs and loved ones may feel differently.

So, perhaps your best course is down the middle — like at First Citizens. Large enough to have all the full-time expertise you need, but sized so that you're planning your estate on a one-to-one basis with professional Trust Officers who are really concerned about what's best for your particular situation. More important, those same officers will be there when those you've planned for need them most.

That's the kind of trust and estate planning operation you'd expect from a bank that prides itself on the soundness of its advice and on its "fit." That is, its ability to suit the needs, style, and size of most North Carolinians.

That philosophy of "fit" is one reason that First Citizens has more branches, more offices than any other bank in the state. It has also made us one of the soundest, most secure banks anywhere in the country.

"Fit." As with a fine suit of clothes, that's what best describes the perfect estate plan...and the perfect bank.

At First Citizens, you'll never find less help than you need, and you'll never have to pay for more.
