I next Saturday HIS PRIDE.

- "I haven't much in the way o' wealth," he said with a smile to me.
- "But I never have left a dozen men to drown in a wintry sea.
- There are things I want that I cannot buy, but I am satisfied after all,
- For I never have bandaged a woman's eyes an' shot her against a wall.
- "The papers each morning leave out my name, there is nothing in all I do
- That editors look on as real live news or worthy, a line or two.
- But I'm quite contented the way things are; to my fate I am reconciled,
- For I have never laughed in a golden court while women were being defiled.
- "It isn't much that I've had on earth, but all that I've had I've earned,
- An' I never have heard old people shriek in grief as their homes I burned.
- The only power I own down here is a vote on election day,
- But that's better far than the kind of might that will slaughter a babe at play.
- "I'd rather be in my humble shack with the little that's mine to own,
- Than the blood-stained creature of wealth and power who sits on a Prussian throne;
- For I never have crimsoned the ground with blood, nor ordered a wife to die,
- Nor left men there in the wintry sea, to get what I couldn't buy."

A UNITED NORTH AND SOUTH.

Tryon is a "melting pot" for North and South. Like two rivers they unite here and float down life's stream calmly and peacefully together. Tryonites will therefore appreciate the following from Governor Bickett's speech before the League to Enforce Peace, at Philadelphia, about three weeks ago—one of the best and most original, pithy, witty and sen-sible war talks delivered anywhere.

It was a corker:

I have been particularly asked to speak for the south on this occasion. Well, this much I will say, and this much I will swear-Dixie will do her duty! Already from the Potomac to the Rio Grande is heard the cry that rang through Shiloh's woods and Chickamaugua, the fearless south cheering on her sons, and I know that when the Godlike genius of Lee and the unconquerable soul of Grant shall sit down together at the council table of the allies, when the martial notes of the Battle Hymn of the Republic shall mingle with the maddening strains of Dixie, when the fiery spirits of Sheridan and Stonewall Jackson shall ride the whirlwind and direct the storm, then something bad is going to happen to the Hindenburg line. -W.
