

SCHOOLS

School Notes.

The Tryon High School students have just finished their mid-semester examinations. A feeling of relief prevails throughout the High School as this one big job is finished.

Mr. Schilleter says that he is very well pleased with the excellent record made by the High School students on their first semester work. We have few failures, but there are only a few students who will have to take their grade over next year.

The Tryon Literary Society elected its mid-semester officers on last Friday as follows: Dan Rion, president; Betty Doubleday, vice president; Ruth Eva, secretary and treasurer.

On last Friday morning the children of the Tryon School heard one of the most interesting talks that has been given here in some time. Miss Campbell, who has spent several years of her life training boys and girls in the dark parts of Egypt, told the school of a "Day in Cairo." The talk was given in such language that it was most interesting to every child from the first grade to the High School.

Our School wishes Miss Campbell the best of success with her work in Egypt.

Jazz Dances or Minuet

Shall we off with the new and on with the old, reversing the well-known axiom? Miss Bina M. West of Port Huron, Mich., Supreme Commander of the Women's Benefit Association seeks to aid the revival of old-fashioned dances. But Olive Belle Hamon, daughter of the late Jake L. Hamon ardently advocates jazz and presents a beautiful argument.

Hans Grosser, a diamond cutter of Amsterdam, was arrested for stealing three gems which he had hidden in his ears.

William Jones of Walton, England, had one son as first man, and another to give the bride away when he married again recently at the age of 73.

Famous English Poet of Seventh Century

The earliest English poet of whom there is any record was St. Caedmon, whose festival is celebrated in both the Roman and Anglican calendars. He lived in the Seventh century in Northumbria, the son of a farmer, and his poetic gifts were said to be of miraculous origin.

At drinking parties each person present was supposed to compose and sing a verse. Caedmon was unable to compose a line, and when the hard was brought of he always ned roo the festive party.

On one such occasion when he was lamenting his lack of poetic ability, a vision appeared to him and inspired him to write a poetic version of the Creation. The manuscript of this work, supposed to have been composed by Caedmon, is preserved at Oxford. Caedmon translated into Anglo-Saxon the whole of sacred history. He became a monk in the convent of which the famous Hilda was abbess.

There he lived and sang and died, in the odor of sanctity, and was afterward canonized.—Chicago Journal.

Edwin Reynolds of Falmouth, Maine, reported that he had eaten 14,000 apples this year from a tree 70 years old.

THE TRYON SHELTON HOTEL

Latest Approved Design for the TRYON SHELTON

OUT of several designs of varying architecture, this delightful structure of English style has been selected and officially approved for construction.

The west bank of Lake Lanier's upper basin is now being surveyed and cleared for the foundation work. Actual construction will begin this month.

Soon Spring will cover this chosen knoll with a mantel of flower-decked green. The graceful roof-lines of the Tryon-Shelton will be peering through the tree tops. Its structure will be an ever-welcoming beacon to motoring guests from far and wide.

And they will not hasten to say good-bye. The spell of the mountains will hold them. The calm waters at their door will soothe them. The pine-centered breezes will charm them. The atmosphere of it all will be irresistible. They will linger long.

Lake Lanier will be a favorite play ground and rest ground year in and year out, and Tryon-Shelton the haven.

Reservations for the formal opening may be made by writing the Continental Hotels Company, Incorporated at New York City.
