Hardly Gras Carnival Trove Success

The annual carnival held Tuesday evening at the Parish House was a financial success. The most attractive feature was the Modernist panel with the lights were the prevailing colors of the carnival. This was done by the committee of Mrs. Double-land, Mrs. Crandall. On the other side of the booths. The case of the carnival was a cleverly prepared by Mrs. Mary Mundy, assisted by Mrs. Grady. Mrs. Killham, and another booth. Mrs. Crandall had charge of the booth. Coffee was served to all the guests by Mrs. Grady. Mrs. Grady was furnished during the evening by a Spartanburg orchestra.

The "Miss Band" consisting of Miss Pratt, Adell Pratt, Lorraine Stone, Messrs. Gerald Stone, Lawrence Goellett, Margaret and Harold Randall, gave several choice selections during the evening to a most appreciative audience. Little Miss Johnson, of Detroit, a guest at the carnival, and the Charleston exceeded all and received generous applause. Mrs. Marie Pratt and her sister, Mrs. Willis Pratt, entertained with two "soft shoe" numbers. Paper balls and confetti were scattered over the floor under the direction of Mrs. Carroll Rogers. Her assistants were Miss Porcher, Mrs. Rodrick, Mrs. Conrad and Miss Lorraine Stone.

Mrs. Holmes sold flowers.

Mrs. Carter Brown, the "African King" had charge of the dancing. The grand march was led by Mr. Gerald Stone and Mr. Harold Crandall. Mr. Brown's costume was one of the best ever seen on a Carnival floor. Mr. Brown was very attractive as "African King." Mrs. Adams and Miss Herring deserve creditable mention in their representation of "Raz-dy Ann and Andy." Messrs. Crandall, Goellett, Weibel and Gerald Stone wore Pharisist costumes. Mrs. Betty and Margaret Doubleday were beautiful in their Pierrot costumes. Miss Margaret Law was lovely in her Spanish attire. Mrs. Merrick was a beautiful shepherdess costume of paper, and Mr. Merrick and Miss Grady had on clever paper hats. Mr. Mazzanovich and Mr. Willis were East Indians. Mrs. Adams was striking as the "Queen of Sheba." All of the revelers were splendidly costumed, and the whole affair was most enjoyable. Great credit is due those who worked to make it such a success. There were about two hundred and twenty-five guests at this affair.

A ROYAL HOST.

"U sosieda chata byla,
U sosieda jonka byla
A u mene ne chatinka
Nema schtastwee, nema jonka—"
The song the young Cossack was singing in Russian had the enchanting melody of a folk-song and then suddenly and to our surprise he sang in English the same lines:

"Sallie, Sallie, Sallie,
My neighbor has a home,
My neighbor has a wife,
I haven't even a little house,
Not even luck—not even a wife."

The first verse ended. Evidently Barry had told the young Cossack my name.

"Get up, Sallie," whispered Barry, "it's a pretty little custom of theirs, and when the song's finished you're supposed to acknowledge the compliment by touching his glass."

The song ended as I arose to my feet, at the same time touching his glass with mine. Then we drained the slender gob-lets of the delicious wine.

The officer was introduced all around. After he was seated, Barry and Curtiss made several attempts to start a conversation about the Bolshevick situation in his former country, but he was adroitly evasive each time.

"Permit me to order a little repast," he begged, "something typical of the old days. For tonight at least allow me to be the host."

The men in our party exchanged glances of admiration for this man who, though pressed for funds, was instinctively a gentleman whose happiness it was to treat us as if we were his guests.

"Don't worry," whispered Barry in a hushed voice, intercepting a look of anxiety on my face. "We'll fix it at the last. It would be embarrassing to refuse. They're sticklers for hospitality and he hasn't got used to the fact yet that he's running this place to eke out a livelihood."

"How lovely to have you order for us!" I cried. "Every time I meet an American friend over here they rave about the marvelous food they've had in some Russian place, and so far I haven't had any real queer dishes
at all."

He smiled.
"She's quite young, n'est-cepas?"
he asked Andre Mollere, "and like the Vesinka."

"We overheard."
"What does that mean, Barry? Tell me, for goodness sake!"
"Here's where my scant knowledge of Russian stands me in good stead," he replied, "as it happens Captain Tchertkov has just paid you a very pretty compliment. He has likened you to the Spring."

Glancing quickly up, I met the Cossack's eyes.
"May I have the pleasure of the dance?" he asked.

I wanted to dance with him because he executed even the most difficult steps with more than ordinary grace,
but his foreign manner of bestowing
his attention upon me was so marked that I was beginning to feel a bit uncomfortable.

"I have this with my husband,"
I replied. Then nodded to Curtiss who was quick to respond.

"Now pyroschki," he announced,
passing what I presumed to be cakes.
"Flap-jacks and cheese," avowed Curtiss after the first bite.

sometimes with sweets between, and sometimes with caviar," agreed our host.

"And what is this last, the desert?" I inquired; "it's much better than our ice cream, though they're not unlike."

"It's sugared frost or Sacharni Moroz," he said. "When I was a boy I remember shouting 'Sacharni Moroz!' I would rush to the window and there would stand with Sacharni Moroz under their hats—which as you know are very tall."

We laughed gaily.
"It's sugared frost," I repeated. "Sacharni Moroz. It has a musical lilt almost like a folk-song."

"Yes," agreed Lemoyne. "Imagine just plain ice cream being called by anything as poetic as that."

The repast finished, we settled down comfortably for a talk.
"Won't you tell us something about yourself?" I asked, "and your friends. I assure you it's not from curiosity I ask, but from sincere and friendly interest."

His face, which had been wreathed in smiles, now grew sad.

"There is not much that one can say," he said, "only that we are fortunate to have got out and not waited until the last. We are young and can start up the hill again, but the old ones—uggg," his eyes narrowed with sudden hate, "they are the ones who have suffered and lost."

"Have you many friends here?" Andre Mollere asked.

BOX PLAITS

An exceptionally smart effect is gained in the Jenny method. I have sketched here at the left. In this dress pairs of the box plaits are held together near the bottom of the skirt with narrow bands of fur applied as shown at A, thus making a kind of double plait. The plait between each of these pairs is left free.

Another unusual and decorative treatment of box plaits is shown in the heavy silk crepe frock at the right. Here the plaits are arranged in points at the top. To do this lay the plaits in the usual way as shown at B. Cut the tops into points as at C. Then slash down about a half inch between the plaits as shown at D. Turn under the raw edges as at E and the skirt
