Footsteps thudded away on the gravel, and I heard the scratching of the one-legged man's crutch as he stumped in front of us and the cart jolted forward. We emerged into the Green lane, heading toward the East river, and a thrill tickled my spine as I heard the chanting tones of old

Diggory Leigh, our ward watchman. "Ten o'clock of a clear, dark night, and the wind in the nor'west. And all's well!"

"Easy, all!" whispered Silver's voice. "Push on, ye swabs; push on! | But hold your gab. I'll do the talk-

Diggory's lanthorn-stave jingled on the ground.

"I do." he returned in pompous tones. "What keeps you abroad so late? Y'are seafaring men, I judge." "Now I calls that clever," protested Silver with unconcealed admiration. You sees us in the dark, and straight off you says, 'seafaring men.' I can see you're a vigilant watchman, shipmate. I'd hate to be a neefarious fellow in your town. Blow my scuttlebutt. I would!"

Diggory's appreciation of this tribute was mirrored in his voice.

'Tis essential that our citizens be protected," he answered. "Yet there are those who have accused me of sleeping on watch."

"Skulkers, they be-low-lived skulkers as ever was," Silver assured him. "I know how you feel. Here we've been a workin' since sunup, a-shiftin' cargo and stowin' it aboard, and I'll lay you a piece of eight the captain never so much as sarves, out a extry noggin o' rum." We had paddled through Ghent's complex waterways and were wondering where we could leave our canoe in safety, when some racing shells shot past, a boathouse pennant fluttered. and a cheery voice invited us to utilize the Royal Club Nautique for as long as we wished. So we stored our canoe in the club's "garage," then drove through the town to a quaint inn whose leaded panes looked out doormat, and refrained from striking upon a row of shops built into the outer walls of a great Gothic church, Melville Chater writes in the National Geographic Magazine.

In the Sixteenth century, about the time Albrecht Durer stopped here, it was the house of the Grocers' guild. Later it was privately owned for a couple or more centuries. No, as an inn I wouldn't call it particularly old."

After that we reverentially used the matches on the woodwork.

I obeyed him in silence, while he and the others cursed and blasphemed with a fluency defying description. What a company! Except in Murray's presence they owned no discipline, accepted no restraint. Palpably they hated as well as feared him, and I found myself wondering how order in Spanish, the steady splash secure a hold he had upon their passions. Let them once cast off pulled away. My great-uncle watched the spell of his magnetism and suit for a moment, then turned toward perior wickedness, and they would become so many irresponsible agents of lust and destruction.

I shuddered and was-glad of the hooded cabin-lamp as we stowed Peter's limp body into the constricted space of a bunk; gladder still when they tramped away and left me alone with the Dutchman.

Through a porthole the lights of New York winked farewell to me. I was as frightened as a child by himself for the first time in the dark.

the Blanc Mont action shows the attitude of the men in the trenches to ward the war.

It was the last day of September, and as the forenoon went by an intermittent drizzle sent the battalion to such miserable shelters as the men could improvise. Company commanders and second in command went up toward ruined Somme-Py for reconnaissance and returned to profane the prospect to their platoon leaders.

LIGHT AND FRESH AIR FOR POULTRY

Hens are on a strike. Colds, roup and frozen combs, the greatest food bin robbers and profit side-trackers of the poultrymen are chiefly responsible, say Kansas State Agricultural college poultrymen. Comfort for the flock means dryness more than it means warmth. The hen is a high speed motor and in breathing throws off a vast amount of moisture The solution is to leave at least onethird of the south side open, with no glass or glass substitute present to interfere with the free passage of fresh air or the direct sun rays, the college poultrymen advise.

"Poultry must have an abundance of fresh air and light. One of the simplest and least expensive methods of securing it is by means of the open-front principle," says W. G. Ward, the college extension archi-

"Openings should be provided in the upper part of the south wall, with an area equal to one-tenth of the floor space. If the house is reasonably deep no glass will be needed in these openings but muslin frames should be provided to protect the flock from draft during severe storms. In houses already built with many windows, the upper sash should be replaced with, muslin frames which should remain open most of the time.

"In buildings inadequately lighted, the present small windows may be removed and the openings enlarged. Poultry will thrive in relatively low temperatures providing they are dry and free from drafts."

The poultry house also must have ample space to give best results, Ward says. From three to four square feet of floor area and from seven to ten inches of roosts should be provided for each hen, the larger figures applying to the heavier breeds. Too many poultry houses are overcrowded, and in many cases it will be found profitable to decrease the flock size, if It is not possible to therease housing facilities.

Good Stock Kept Warm Essential in Brooding

Chicks from stock of good quality, and a warm hover are two essentials of successful brooding, in the opinion of specialists at the New Jersey State college poultry department. High feed prices, they contend, can be offset only by heavy layers, and such birds can be produced only from vigorous chicks. Experienced poultrymen maintain a hover temperature of 95 to 100 degrees. At this temperature the chicks will arrange themselves around the edge of the hover. perhaps not evenly, but at least in a few groups, and when so located one can feel reasonably sure that his flock is being properly heated.

As the birds become older they can move away from the heat if they so desire. If the heat is removed from them, however, they will crowd in close to the stove or in the corner in an ef fort to get warm. In addition to plenty of heat, have a temporary wire fence, of threefourths-inch mesh and eighteen inches high, stretched around the chicks for the first few days. After the third day, gradually open out this fence until the chicks have the run of the house. When entirely opened, however, the fence should still be rounded at the corners and should be three or four inches from the sides of the house. In case the chicks have a tendency to crowd to one side they will not be crowding against a solid partition. There will be an air space back of the flock, so that no serious results should follow.

Profit and Loss

Calculate the profit or loss on the past year's work with poultry. Outline the program for next year. Make a number of good resolutions to improve the weak points in the past year's program, Poultry will pay good dividends on the investment in proportion to the careful planning and wise management used in caring for it.

Poultry Hints

***************** Firm, smooth eggshells are made with plenty of oyster shell and grit.

This is a good time to repair the hen house and provide comfortable quarters for the flock.

The only way to give them a good start, and to insure a heavy lay, is to give them the benefits of a clean house, free from insects, pests, and free from disease.

Cleanliness is one of the most important problems confronting poultry flock owners.

Straw costs money in some parts of the country, but bear in mind the distinction between a hen house and a dairy barn.

Clean eggs, packed in bright, new case will bring top prices. A short fattening period pays on all fowls to be marketed, A separate pen with moist mashes and grain before them at all times means quick fattening.

The Kansas station recommends this as a good laying mash: Equal parts of corn and oats ground together eighty pounds; high-grade tankage ten pounds. Keep in an open hopper where the hens can help themselves.

Listen a moment when you close the hen house door at night for the hard breathing or throat rattling that indicates roup. Removing two or three infected birds in time may prevent the trouble from going through
