National Park For The East

(From The New York Herald-Tribune March 18.)

Excepting Lafayette Park, the little gem on Mount Desert, in Maine, all the national parks are in the West. The East might resign itself to this unequal division if there were no extensive tracts this side of the Mississippi of scenic attraction to justify their reservation, "scenery of a quality," according to the accepted standard, "so unusual and impressive, or natural features so unusual and extraordinary as to possess national interest and importance, as contradistinguished from local interest." But in the southern Appalachians are two large areas which in the judgment of the survey committee of the Department of the Interior meet the requirement. If the funds necessary for their purchase can be raised they will be accepted and administered by the government as national parks.

One lies in the heart of the Great Smoky Mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina, the other on the crest of the Blue Ridge of Virginia. Both are forest regions as yet unspoiled.

The Great Smokies tract, about fifty miles long by fifteen wide, embraces many thousands of acres of virgin forest, trees magnificent in size and bountiful in variety. It is a beautiful wilderness and resort of wild life, a true mountain fastness whose peaks tower higher than Mount Washington. It is rich in streams and cataracts, in cliffs and gorges. While it cannot rival the marvelous conformations of the Western parks it yields to none of them in natural charm.

There is no prospect, however, of appropriations by Congress to secure the desired territory as forests. Nor will the government make the necessary outlay to buy the land for national parks, its policy in this matter being entirely receptive. With admirable initiative, therefore, the people of Tennessee, North Carolina and Virginia have set about in earnest to raise the required millions for carrying out the Great Smoky and Shenandoah projects. Their enterprise should enlist the hearty support of other states. Time presses, for the lumbermen are now in possession and are only holding off to give the campaign an opportunity to succeed.

A special committee of the Tryon Chamber of Commerce has been working for three weeks to raise Polk county's small quota of $1,000 for the Smoky Mountain National Park. One hundred men and women were asked to give ten dollars each. That is a small sum to contribute toward this wonderful thing for North Carolina.

But in spite of personal and mail solicitation the returns so far indicate that Polk county will not do its full duty by April 31, the date set for closing the campaign. Most of those persons who are naturally supposed to benefit most directly by the enormous traffic which will result from the establishment of such a great playground in the state have not contributed at all.

But, aside from material benefits to North Carolina the project should appeal to the pride of every one in the state. If it doesn't then the great lumber corporations which are rapidly destroying the beauty of this wonderful tract will have cause to rejoice.

Every mountain county in the state, except Polk, has raised its quota. The project may succeed in spite of this, but what will be the feelings of citizen of Polk when he starts his car for a trip to visit a great national park to which he has contributed nothing?

THE horoscope of fashion foretells a joyous and colorful mode for the young girl for spring. Especially will blithesome youth attire itself in novelty woolen coats from beneath which will peep the sprightliest sort of a silken frock. Topped with a gay little flower-covered chapeau of felt or straw, fabric or ribbon, what item more could one wish to delight the eye! Oh, yes, the scarf! What a sin of omission 'twould be to forget to add a vivid scarf to Miss Sixteen's spring costume.

It is not at all surprising that the little mademoiselle in the picture chose a plaided coat in preference to any other novelty woolen, for large handsome plaids are an outstanding feature for this spring. She is wearing a phantom red crepe de chine scarf although a bright green one would be just as stylish.

Very handsome camel's hair coatings carry out the paramount idea of novelty in that they depart from the general idea of camel's hair materials by featuring plaids, stripes and gay patterns, maintaining the usual soft fuzzy texture yet smartly bespeaking the vogue in their colorings. Included in these are large bold plaids in several colors on a tan or gray background while others show solid tones with odd border effects.

Clever straightline coats made of woolen fabric which is plaided at the top portion developing into a border of colorful tapestry design, boast caplets which are cut from the border section and which extend only across the back.

The popular plaid coat is as apt to be single-breasted as double and it glories in very imposing pockets at times. Many a plaid coat is collared with fur, dyed moulton and squirrel being favored.

Very swagger new coats are cut to flare from the shoulders and these vie with straightline silhouettes for supremacy. Often a border of plain cloth outlines the front edges and the bottom, with collars and cuffs carrying the same idea.

Most of the men who enter Southern Railway service make it their life's calling

RAILROADING a man's job

THERE is no occupation in the world which is more exacting in its demands on the individual than railroading. That is why the world over the term "railroad man" denotes men of character, trustworthiness and useful citizenship.

But if the demands on the individual railroad man are great, so are the opportunities. The men with the responsibilities of leadership on the Southern today have grown up with the railroad.

To handle the greater traffic of the growing South expeditiously, economically and dependably, the Southern needs the best men of the South.

Railroading has always attracted the best type of citizenship. And it always will. It is a man's job.
