World Traveler Buys Villa

During her long career as a world traveler Miss Ackermann has been sent by many varied interests, magazines and syndicates, to the earth's most remote corners. For seventeen years she worked as an associate of the late William T. Stead. In her study of the operation of governments she has been privileged to sit with legislatures while such bodies made laws in Iceland, Finland, China and other little known regions.

On a recent visit to Tryon Miss Ackermann met at dinner several of this city's interesting people and became much impressed with its social atmosphere. Most interesting were her reminiscences of interviews with Japan's emperor, Tagore, India's poet-philosopher, Tesla, Lloyd George, Olive Schreiner, Ellen Key, Marie Corelli, Hall Caine, Tolstoy and Robert Louis Stevenson, whom she visited at his Vilaima home in the South Sea Islands. Her discussion of world conditions and problems left a distinct impression upon her hearers that she is a sympathetic world citizen.

MODEL SHOE FACTORY OPERATED AT SESQUI

Plant, Manned by 100 Skilled Workmen Free to Exposit on Visitor's

The development of the "Gentle Art" of shoe making, from the earliest time to the present day is portrayed in an exhibit at the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, Philadelphia, which includes the operation of a model shoe factory, employing more than 100 skilled workmen.

The advance of the industry, from the days when footwear was made by the lone workman with his awl, lapstone and waxed ends, to the present time when thousands of pairs of all kinds of shoes and boots are turned out daily in the numerous factories in the country is shown step by step in the group of buildings which make up the exhibit of the Louis Mark Shoe Company, a Philadelphia concern operating sixteen retail stores in the "Sequoi City," and a huge factory in Chicago which supplies a large part of the boots worn by army men throughout the Nation.

Eighty-seven machines used in the making of shoes are in place in the model shoe factory. Twelve of these machines are new inventions and are shown at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition for the first time anywhere. Expert shoemakers from the New England states have been imported by the Mark Company to operate the machines. The model factory, which operates from 1 P. M. to 10 P. M., daily, has a capacity of 100 pairs of shoes per day. The exhibits is free to Sesqui visitors and guides are posted at advantageous positions in the factory to explain the processes of making factory footwear.

The exhibit is planned on a scale larger than ever attempted before. In the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, fifty years ago, a group of shoe manufacturers combined to form an exhibit showing the "last word" in the development of the industry at that time. By comparison with the high-speed and efficient machines of today, the facilities of that time appear archaic.

The building in which the exhibit is housed is one of the show places on the Exposition grounds. A tower, surpassed in height only by the massive Tower of Light, rises ninety-seven feet into the air. The interior of the tower is illuminated by a specially-designed chandelier studded with 600 high-powered electric lamps.
