Pitt Farmers Placing Emphasis On Hog Growth

Pitt county farmers are placing emphasis on better hog production during 1948, reports Jack Keiley, animal husbandry specialist for the State College Extension Service.

Last year the county stressed corn production, with civic organizations of Greenville sponsoring a corn growing contest. Now, under the leadership of County Agent S. C. Winchester and Assistant Agent W. H. Pruden, farmers will give special attention to hog production as the best method of marketing their corn, Mr. Keiley said.

The same civic groups will sponsor several 4 H Club pig projects in the county this year. The agents are working with several of the purebred breeders to develop better hogs so that foundation stock can be furnished to the commercial growers in the county, making it unnecessary for them to go out of the county to buy good breeding stock.

Mr. Keiley said the county already has a good pasture program which includes crimson clover, rye grass, and small grains for winter grazing, and Ladino clover for year-round grazing.

Among the purebred breeders in Pitt are Joe Moye of Farmville, a Duroc breeder and the only man in the State who has purchased two $1,000 boars; C. H. Carraway of Farmville and Marvin T. Barnhill of Stokes, both Berkshire breeders; and H. T. Smith of Fountain, another Duroc breeder. Last year Mr. Smith entered his sows in the Production Registry program. The sows farrowed an average of 24 pigs each and raised 19 pigs each from the two litters, with the heaviest litter weighing 412 pounds. Four of the five sows qualified in the Production Registry with the required weight of 320 pounds or more per litter. Mr. Smith sold 63 hogs last year for breeding purposes, and he expects to increase that number this year.

David L. Kelly Assumes Post In Farm Bureau

GREENSBORO — David L. Kelly, Winston-Salem, authorization officer for the Veterans Administration Claims division, has been appointed assistant secretary of the North Carolina Farm Bureau, R. Flake Shaw, Greensboro, executive vice-president and secretary, announced recently.

Kelly, an attorney, was reared in Yadkin county, where he practiced law for 11 years prior to joining the Veterans Administration. He was with VA in Fayetteville for two years before assignment to the Winston-Salem office where he has been authorization officer for the past two years.

As assistant secretary of the State Farm Bureau, Kelly succeeds Will H. Rogers, Fuquay Springs, who resigned recently to devote his time to farming and private business. Kelly, already active in his new position, will have headquarters in the Farm Bureau's State office in Greensboro.

Kelly, a Mason and member of the Methodist church, is married to the former Catherine Church, of Elkin. They have two children, a boy and a girl, and reside at 423 Brooktown avenue, Winston-Salem.

Airplanes Will Spray County Tomato Crop

Carteret county's 1,500-acre tomato crop will be sprayed by use of airplanes this year, R. M. Williams, county agent, reported today.

The cost will be borne now by the Beaufort cannery but will be paid later by the farmers when they sell their crop. Spraying will aid in the fight against fusarium, a blight which kills the plants.

Although the plants arriving from Florida were advanced beyond the transplanting stage when they were shipped here and many poor stands were the result, replanting has resulted fairly good stands, Mr. Williams said.

Prices on cabbage have been as low as $20 a ton and on several days no cabbage was bought at all.

Morehead City Doctor Returns from New York

Dr. S. W. Hatcher, Morehead City, returned recently from New York City where he took a one-week course at Knickerbocker hospital on the treatment and diagnosis of poliomyelitis.

Dr. Hatcher undertook the work at the request of the Carteret County Chapter for infantile paralysis. The intensive week's course is attended by doctors from all parts of the United States who are informed of the latest developments in the treatment of polio.

Sweet Potatoes Come Out of 'Hibernation'

The 13,000 bushels of sweet potatoes stored in the Willis Brothers sweet potato barn, Williston, are being washed and graded these days for shipment to market. Charles Willis, overseer, estimated that all the potatoes would be out of the barn by the end of this week.

Pictured here is a part of the crew of 15 workers who started grading the potatoes about three weeks ago. Corbett Brothers, Williston, are purchasing most of them at an average of $2.50 per bushel.

The crop moving to market now was dug in October. The curing process involves blowing hot air over them for 15 days which dries them out and keeps them from rotting. On very cold days during the winter a fire is built the overseer said to prevent the potatoes' freezing.

Does a cured potato taste any different than one eaten a couple days after it comes out of the ground? Mr. Willis claims not, but discerning sweet potato eaters have been heard to declare that cured potato has a better flavor than a fresh one.

Water Inspector Has Tough Job When It Rains

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — (AP) — When it rains and snows, pity the poor guy who has to go out and see what's happening. He's the water inspector, or water commissioner as he's known in western communities. It's his job to protect the vital lifeline of the drylands—the dams and reservoirs and irrigation ditches.

In El Paso county, he's J. M. Pribble. In 19 years on the job, he's fought through every kind of bad weather except a typhoon. When there's a flash flood, Pribble has to see that the runoff doesn't run off with the gates along the ditches. He must make weekly measurements of all available water—and snow. He must find out how fast it's disappearing and advise farmers and water companies accordingly.
