Soviet Doctors Use Honey to Treat Ulcers

MOSCOW—(AP)—Honey is being used successfully in the Soviet Union to treat stomach ulcers, says the newspaper "Evening Moscow". About 250 patients suffering from ulcers have been treated in the Ostomov, Basman and Moscow garrison hospitals, the paper says.

About 250 grams of honey were given the patients for periods of 14 to 18 days. In many cases pains disappeared after the first day. About 80 per cent of those treated had their ulcers healed by the honey treatment. The article says honey was used during the war in treating wounds and that considerable research and experiment has been since conducted along these lines.

Mrs. Henry Bellaman Completes Husband's Sequel To 'King's Row'

Parris Mitchell of Kings Row, by Henry and Katherine Bellaman, Simon and Schuster, New York, 1948.

Those who have read, "Kings Row" will remember Henry Bellaman as an author successfully peering into and dissecting the cross section of a small mid-western town. In "Parris Mitchell of Kings Row," Bellaman readers will recall the characters which made his first book famous; the malignant Fulmer Green, the young widow Randy, editor Miles Jackson, the misfit Jamie Wakefield, all a little older and a great deal wiser.

Planned as the second book of a series, which would bring life of Kings Row up to the present time, this book is written jointly by Mr. and Mrs. Bellaman. In a foreword, Mrs. Bellaman explains that she is finishing her husband's work, (due to his recent death), from the notes and the plans he had made. She points out that she has worked closely with him in all of his work; that they together talked out stories in minutes detail. She adds that she will not attempt to copy his style in the scenes of this book he has not written.

Somehow, whenever an author's work has to be finished by another writer, the presence of an alien hand always stays consciously or inadvertently in the back of the reader's mind. This seems true especially, when the author is a favorite of the reader.

"Parris Mitchell of Kings Row" proves no exception. The reader feels that the book isn't up to snuff, as compared to "Kings Row." A stranger, even though it may be Bellaman's wife and literary alter ego, has been tampering with his private ideas.

Nonetheless, even though the story's rhythm does waver, Mrs. Bellaman succeeds in carrying out the purpose of the Kings Row trilogy, the portrayal of the life of a small town, through the sociological and psychological effects upon its inhabitants, from the young drugstore cowboys, to old Sam Winters the grave digger.

Her development of Henry Bellaman's characters in King's Row is a natural and honest development. The reader finds no sinners turning into saints overnight. And the points have enough of the sinner in them to make them interesting human beings.

Of prime interest in her forward is the telling of her close working association with her husband. Says she, "...He never, at any time, wrote a scene that had not been clearly rehearsed, and after it was written, he never revised a passage. Any revision or cutting or editing fell to my lot. For that reason the characters created were my constant companions as well as his."

It is this same close association between a writing couple that James Street, novelist, who spoke recently at Webb Memorial Civic Center in Morehead City, referred Parris Mitchell is available at the Carteret County Public library.

E. R. Willis Continues Campaign in Home County

Elwood R. Willis, Marshallberg, candidate seeking election as the state senator from the seventh district, returned to his home county, Carteret, over the weekend after campaigning for the past five counties of the district.

Mr. Willis, who formerly taught school in this county, has been affiliated with the state department of revenue, the United States department of internal revenue, and is now representative her for the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance company.

Mr. Willis, in his campaign literature, points out that the seventh district has not been represented by a Carteret couman since 1921. Since that time the senator has come six times from Jones county and five times from Craven.
