SOUTH WIND Lines from the Sea

By Robert Morris

Upon rediscovery of summer and the birth of Carteret's best newspaper, I have suddenly realized an incumbent desire to return to writing.

Writing, to me, has always seemed the most activating and vital method of stirring thought or causing scrutiny, and after some very careful thought myself, I have come to the conclusion that this is exactly what is wrong today. People are too busy and aggressive to stop and think.

Serious thinking has led me to believe that there is more than we perceive or comprehend in human nature and beauty. This seems very obvious until we examine these objects more closely and find that there is an individual comprehension or perception in appreciating simplicity. Not that this is necessarily the answer, but if people would think of everything they say before they say it and consider the consequences and influence of the acts they perform, there might be less to regret and more to be happy about in the minds of people.

What I propose to do is to set before the readers of Carteret County some of my thoughts and ideas about life. These ideas, while being the result of concentrated thought, are presented here with the intention of invoking thought on the part of the public of this newspaper.

Many people have often asked me why I write, and while my usual answer is an overpowering contagion in art which I feel to be indomitable, I can honestly say that my purpose in this venture is to try to awaken people to the vast horizon of understanding that comes from thought and, as mentioned before, an invincible nymph from the depths of appreciation that makes me want to let the whole world know of my Great Love.

And besides, I like to write.

WRITERS

(Continued From Page Four) Linda sweeps in. Angry dialogue. Rex fiddles with the fastener, yanks it. R-r-rip! A cascade of pearls from Linda's shattered necklace, and Harrison holds the dress top in his hands. Linda flees, covering her bosom. The scene is right. Applause from the crew.

The picture, in which Harrison plays a symphony conductor, marks his inevitable Hollywood introduction to slapstick comedy. In his native Britain he was known principally for smart drawing-room stuff. Hitherto in Hollywood he has played a Siamese king, a sea captain's ghost, and a Mississippi river gambler. In the current epic he has set a room afire, been sprayed with a fire hose, been sprayed to slit Linda's throat (all in good fun, kids), and fallen thru a cane-bottomed chair. Rex enjoys slapstick, he says. I wonder.

Orthopedic Clinic Today Dr. Hugh Thompson is holding the regular orthopedic clinic, beginning 12 today in the New Bern Health center.

A Recipe for Radio Hash

Comedians Waste Nary a Gag When Time Cuts Script

(Editor's Note: If you've ever wondered how a radio comedian puts his show together, here's an inside look into a broadcasting studio at rehearsal time.)

By Cynthia Lowry

NEW YORK — Fred Allen, the flat-voiced comedian with the as-tringent wit, uses left-over gags the way a thrifty housewife makes a hash from the remains of the Sunday roast.

"The script always run overtime," the comedian explained after a rehearsal of his half-hour radio show. "We have to cut it to fit, but we never throw away a y-thing we can possibly use. Of stuff that is purely topical. Take Noise Abatement week gags. You couldn't use those after Noise Abatement week has passed."

But except for such humor, tied firmly onto the time element, almost everything cut from one week's show is pretty apt to appear in a subsequent one.

Take, for instance, the dialogue between Allen and his announcer Kenny Delmar, on a recent Sunday show. Delmar remarked that a chemist had predicted whiskey of the future could be made of wood. Then ensued some chatter, climaxed by Allen's quip: "When a man picks up his cocktail he'll see a knothole in his martini."

This bit, Allen explained, was salvaged from an earlier show. The sequence, however, was much longer in the rehearsal and contained cracks about people calling "timber" instead of "bottoms up," and about drinks really being on the house. Presumably these jokes will be forever lost to posterity for the theme has received its work-out by Allen and company.

Allen's rehearsal ran over almost five minutes in that instance, and plenty of material was chopped from the script before it went on the air. Most of it will show up on late programs.

One gag which hit the cutting room floor and undoubtedly will be heard on the air sometime soon, opened the talk between Allen and the character Titus Moody. Allen told him he looked sour.

"You'd have a sour look to if you dropped your teeth in the vinegar barrel," replied Titus Moody. "My mouth tastes like my tongue's been dilled."

That was deleted in the interests of time, but only temporarily. Mrs. Nussbaum, another Allen character, was temporarily deprived of a couple of lines. They are timely, so it wouldn't be surprising if they showed up next week. The deleted lines ran like this:

"Mrs. Nussbaum: 'By me, in the hood, I am a rustic.'"

Allen: "Really?"

Mrs. N.: "I could be Nature Boy's sister, Nature Girl."

The reference to the popular song, coupled with Mrs. Nussbaum's accent, drew a smile from the pianist—a reaction carefully noted by Allen.

"Allen spends about 60 hours a week getting that half-hour program together," one of his aides said. "Fred and his three writers start working on the script more than a week in advance. They read newspapers from all over and get around. They start with a rough sketch. By the Thursday before the show, it's finished—and usually it runs minutes overtime."

Allen couldn't explain exactly how the job of molding the script to the 30-minute time allotment was accomplished.

"That's a comedian's business," he said. "You have to know which way mar the rugged beauty of the mountain. The shaft has an inconspicuous entrance, then rises 200 feet to a spot about 200 feet from the famous chimney itself. From here, there is only one relatively short staircase to climb to the summit.

No Gold Struck

While the work was going on, there was some speculation that the excavators would find some valuable mineral, maybe gold. But all they got for their trouble was a lot of very fine stone which is being laid on the road, and a very fine hole in the mountain. DeSoto, some hundreds of years ago, came this way and had somewhat the same disappointing experience.

The world-famous rock mountain is on the eastern rim of the Blue Ridges, and with adjacent Rumbling Bald and other mountains, throws up a spectacular barrier against the lowlands, which, however, is easily negotiated by Hickory Nut Gorge and Hickory Nut Gap to the north.

The area, with nearby Lake

Lure, has been well developed and contains hotels, inns, motor courts, children's summer camps, and many recreational facilities, including golf and water sports.

Russian Invents Hand For the Handicapped

MOSCOW — (AP) — A Russian has invented an artificial hand that a blind man could not tell wasn't real when he shook it. The hand was invented by Victor Kononov who lost an arm in military service. The announcement said the Kononov hand can use a hammer, saw, chisel, wrench or axe.

It can also be used in driving an automobile, writing and picking up anything a human hand can raise. Hundreds of persons are said to be using the Kononov hand including N. A. Nikitin, the famous circus horse trainer. He carries his whip in this hand.
