'Poorhouse' Area Begins To Bloom

COLLEGE STATION, Raleigh-Hyatt's Creek, a section once known as the 'poorhouse' community of Clay county, has now become one of the most prosperous areas in the western part of the State, reports T. K. Jones, farm management analyst at State college.

The change, which has come about within the past few years, has been accomplished through improved systems of farming, Mr. Jones declared.

Farms are small, and most farmers must follow intensive systems of cultivation if high incomes are to be obtained, the specialist continued. He said the test-demonstration farm, operated by Frank Groves provides a good example of an improved farming system, which has resulted in increased income and better living.

The Groves farm consists of 60 acres, 30 acres of which is cropland. All the cropland and pasture has been limed at an average rate of three tons per acre. Pasture acreage has been increased from seven to 15 acres by clearing additional land. In addition to lime application, the pasture has been treated with high-analysis phosphate, and a Ladino clover orchard grass pasture has been established.

Since 1942, yields of corn have increased from 30 to 80 bushels per acre. A four-acre field has been seeded to alfalfa, and is yielding about four tons per acre. Silage corn is produced as a speculative roughage.

As production of grain, hay, and pasture has increased, the dairy herd had grown from three to 18 cows. In 1944 the farm was converted to a Grade 'A' dairy. Although a considerable portion of the larger farm earnings have gone into more adequate buildings and needed equipment, home improvements have not been neglected. The home, an old-fashioned two-story structure, has been improved during the past five years until it is conveniently equipped, attractively furnished, and comfortable. A bathroom was installed in 1945 and electricity was obtained last year. An electric washing machine and water heater were installed soon afterward. A modern wash house, an electric refrigerator, and other home improvements are planned for this year.

Pilgrim's Inn Forms Setting For Moving Tale

Literary Guidepost PILGRIM'S INN, by Elizabeth Goudge (Coward-McCann; $3)

This novel overflows with beauty and love and perfection... at least, as Miss Goudge describes them. Sally is very young, charming and perfect; David, poor fellow, is unhappy but so sincere and perfect; old Lady Eliot is the perfect matron; the twins are the perfect children; George, the perfect husband; John, the perfect painter and pap; and the old inn, the perfect setting. There's something about a murder, but it's a nice murder, and adultery is followed by proper repentance.

Like most Clay County families, the Groves family has learned that better farming means better living.
