Clifford Garner, Washington, D. C., immediately, do accurate work and work regularly until job is finished Delivers Banquet Address Friday

Three - Day Session at

The three day convention at At- mails. lantic Beach of North Carolina 36, National Association of Postmasters, to a climax Friday night at the Ocean King hotel with a banquet attended by an overflow crowd of over 150 postmasters and superintendent, Div. no. 2. First was unable to attend. Assistant's Bureau. Washington, D. , was the principal speaker of an expression of appreciation for third vice president; Blanche Pathe hospitality of Harold Webb of rish, fourth vice president; Pearl Morehead City, host postmaster, and others responsible for the success of the convention. He then explored the results of the convention, and said, "I hope that these mutual talks which we have had will help our department in Washington. We should all learn from these conventions.

Garner paid tribute to many outstanding men in the postal field, including Postmaster-General M. Donaldson. "Hannegan, Walker, Farley, and so on down the line, were all fine gentlemen," he said, "but Postmaster-General Donaldson is the first to rise from RESPECTABLE working couple are desperate for three rooms furnished or unfurnished. No post-master general First Assistant Mrs. R. P. Gooding and sons, Tommy and George, and Mr. and post-master general First Assistant Burke has a comparable record.'

The speaker also stressed the importance of courtesy on the part of postal employees. Said Garner, 'Avoid delay, for the post office in general is blamed for local inefficiencies."

Garner advised the postmasters that Congress had been kind, but that the bureau of the budget had cut many appropriations. He told them that if appropriations were inadequate, they should write to Washington.

The banquet opened with an invocation by the Rev. J. V. Axtell of Webb Memorial Presbyterian church, Morehead City. The toast-master was Wilbur R. Dosher, of Wilmington. Garner was preceded by two other speakers, F. J. Scott, of Sears Roebuck, and Fergus Mc-

Ree, postmaster of Richmond. Mrs. Ruth Webb Bailey, Morehead City, accompanied at the Webb sang two numbers, "Lovely Spring" and "Where My Caravan Has Rested." The postmasters then sang as a group "My Wild Irish Rose" and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart.
