NEW KIND OF HEARING AID

Transmits 2 TO 6 TIMES MORE SOUND INTENSITY

Look again at the picture! Here is a hearing aid complete in one unit so small it fits the tiny watch pocket of a man's trousers! A new Beltone record!

Made possible by a new kind of "silver circuit," combining 45 parts and connections into one moistureproof, trouble-free unit.

Yet, the receiver transmits 2 to 6 times more sound intensity than any of 12 other hearing aids tested. Twice as much as even the former Beltone model! This is far more sound intensity than you probably need—or even can stand!

But note this: it means almost unbelievable clarity with the power turned way down. This means glorious hearing comfort. And cuts operation cost to a new low—less than a penny an hour.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

AP Newsfeatures

Efficient planning of all rooms around a small center hall affords access to any room in this house without passage through a covered front stoop protects the entrance to the house as well as to the garage. Designed by the Small House Planning Bureau, St. Cloud, Minn., as Plan B-58, this house gains a wide appearance from its attached garage, but the main body of the house covers only 908 square feet. Including a full sized basement there is a volume of 17,252 cubic feet. Plumbing costs are reduced by juxtaposition of kitchen and bath. There is dining space in the kitchen or end of living room where large windows face the garden. A fireplace could be added in the living room-garage wall. The architects suggest frame siding and asphalt shingle roof.

'The Stage Stinks,' Says Laraine

By Gene Handsaker
HOLLYWOOD — "The stage," says Laraine Day, "stinks." As for pictures: "I like the money they pay. It's the easiest way to make a living."

Smiling and toying with a comb, Mrs. Leo Durocher was talking philosophical shop. "I don't want to see the world on fire any more," she mused. "Let somebody else be the world's greatest actress. I just want to be the world's greatest Dodger fan."

In recognition of her marriage to the Brooklyn manager, the crew of "My Dear Secretary" has put a sign reading "Laraine's Dugout" on her dressing room. The sign has drawings of a baseball and a bat. "Acting used to be so terribly important to me. I worried over parts I didn't get, over being stuck in the Kildare series. I wanted so desperately to win an Academy award. What good is an Academy award? You can't hit a home run with it."

"I certainly want to make good pictures. But I've been happier in this last year and a half (of limited picture-making, so she could be with Leo) because the pressure was off me. When Bergman or Fontaine gets a movie role, I say, 'Isn't that too bad! They'll be on that hot old stage and I'll be at a baseball game eating hot dogs with mustard and drinking sodas! You know, they ought to serve refresh with hot dogs. I have to lug my own bottle of relish to the games.'"

On the stage, said Laraine, "you put on that horrible old greasepaint, sit in an old dressing room, wear the same lousy old costumes, and say the same old lines night after night. It's like eating eggs for breakfast every morning until they run out of your ears. You can't see anybody else perform. I like to work days and be home at night with my kids. What goes on at night that's interesting?"

"This 'do it for art's sake' is not for me. In pictures there's so much more glamor, so much more money. You do a scene and a half hour later you're doing something different. You can be in Cuba or South America and the picture goes on showing for years."

Keenan Wynn, who had joined our conversation, told Laraine, "You don't like acting... But stay away from acting three years and you'll hate yourself." Laraine smiled. "In three years," she said, "I'll be pitching!"

Production of steel ingots in the United States in 1947 totaled 84.7 million tons, about five million under the wartime peak.

and beginning of the first race, "jockeys" lead each dog on to the track and parade before the judges and the grandstand. Every dog wears a numbered satin blanket, the colors of which are a duplicate of those painted on the front of the starting box.

The starting box, actually a large wooden box with eight divisions for each dog, is wheeled on to the track, and the starter, keeping his eye on the mechanical rabbit, springs the box, all eight doors flashing open simultaneously as the rabbit dashes by.

Rabbit Runs Too

The mechanical rabbit is operated electrically and runs on the inside of the track. Authorities on dog racing say that a trained runner will run after anything, even a waving white handkerchief, but the mechanical rabbit lends a bit more drama to the sport.

A judge declares the winner, and assistant judges pick the second and third dog, but less than two minutes after the race ends, a photo of the dogs as they crossed the finish line is in the judges' hands.

The special permanently-mounted camera with a telephoto lens is located in rooms built on the roof of the grandstand from where the mechanical rabbit is operated, as well as the public address system.

Twenty minutes after the first race is run, the second race is called. Each night's program continues until about 11 p.m.

Just west of the grandstand and to the right of the main entrance as one enters the grounds is the clubhouse where bets also may be placed. Box seats are located in the grandstand and on nine tiers in front of the club house.

Directly across the track from spectators is the electric scoreboard which, as soon as the race ends, flashes the judges' decisions.

Free parking space for 1,500 cars is available on the grounds and already parties from all along the eastern seaboard have made reservations at local hotels for the opening of the track.

The Carolina Racing association is confident of a highly successful season. The dogs will race each night, Monday through Saturday, rain or "shine."
