Three Years After V-J Day
Thursday three years ago World War II ended. But observance of this occasion was different than those usually portrayed in movies and novels when a great nation celebrated a victory.
Church doors opened and multitudes entered to offer prayers of thanksgiving and to ask for guidance on the hard road we knew was ahead of us.

Game Called on Account of ...
The softball games scheduled Sunday between Morehead City and Ocracoke didn't come off. Morehead City Jaycees were going to go to the island Sunday in the Air Lapwing and return yesterday morning.

Thoughts for an open mind...

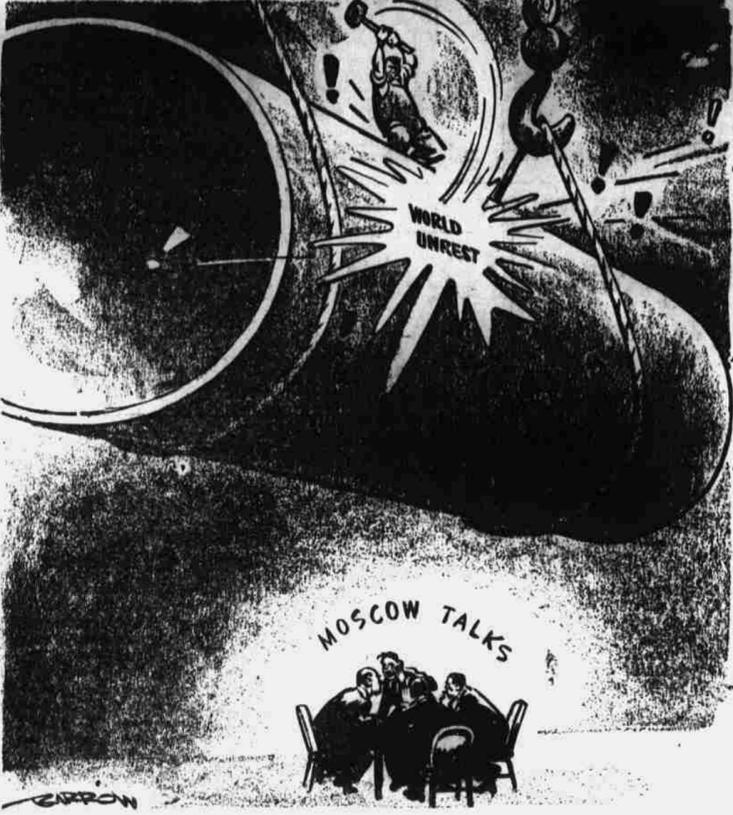

Whether we are in a pleasant or a painful state depends, ultimately, upon the kind of matter that pervades and engrosses our consciousness.
Aristocracy is of three kinds: (1) of birth and rank; (2) of wealth; and (3) of intellect. The last is really the most distinguished of the three.
Set limits to your wishes, curb your desires, moderate your anger, always remembering that an individual attains only a share in anything that is worth having; and that, on the other hand, everyone must incur many ills of life; in a word we must bear and forbear.

HERE and THERE
With F. C. SALISBURY, Morehead City
Persons visiting Morehead City from up state as well as outside the state are at a loss to understand how the city was ever given the right to promote a dog racing with pari-mutuel betting while no other city in the state has such a privilege.

There is an old saying, "there is no accounting for tastes." We would say that must apply to the young man we met on the main drag a day or two ago with a pet skunk riding on his shoulder. We did inquire if said animal had been deodorized. Our experience with this specie of animal is not to trail them but keep them facing you.
Today is the dead line for inspection of all automobiles of 1936 and prior years and all 1947 and 1948 models according to the Motor Vehicle Department. If you are a car owner with models covered by these dates and failed to get them checked while the lanes were operating in your vicinity you are liable for arrest and a fine if the Highway Patrol overhauls you. CONFERENCE IN A BOILER FACTORY registered in the state, 577,681 are yet to be registered by December 31.

If you can remember back 30 years this time of August you will recall the hurricane which struck this city and Beaufort. The storm struck late on a Saturday afternoon and was said to have been the worst storm since the August 18, 1879 one during which time the Atlantic hotel at Beaufort was washed away. It was estimated that the wind was blowing at the rate of 90 miles an hour.

Story of The Week
Present day visitors to old historic Fort Macon, who are not acquainted with North Carolina history of the early days of 1800, often ask who this man Macon was, that this old citadel should be honored with his name.
Nathaniel Macon who was considered one of the shrewdest politicians in North Carolina history was born at Macon Manor in Warren county on December 17, 1758. He studied at Princeton University from 1774 to 1776 when the college was closed on account of the Revolutionary War; served a short time in the New Jersey Militia; studied law at Bute court house, once the legal shrine of Warren county.

As a young man of 28, Macon was elected to the Continental Congress, but declined to serve. In 1791-1815 he was a member of the national House of Representatives, and in 1828-29 of the United States Senate, serving as president pro tem of that body. He was leader of the House during most of Jefferson's two terms and its speaker during the session 1801-1807.
Through native ability and uncanny genius of understanding the small farmers who made up the bulk of North Carolina's population, Macon personified the homely virtues and provincial sentiments of the state and dominated its politics for a full generation.
Macon died at his Buck Spring home in Warren county on January 29, 1837, at the age of 79. His old log home has been preserved by the State Historical Society. Near by the home is his grave, marked by a granite slab recently erected. For more than a century his grave marker was only that which in his great simplicity requested, a pile of rock upon which countless visitors have in turn dropped a stone in appreciation of the man's greatness.
While the old fort today bears his name, as do a college and a county, and the history books of the state exploit his political activities for over a half century, yet few today think of Nathaniel Macon.

Sidewalk observers who watching the construction of the new telephone exchange on 9th street have been at a loss to know the reason for the deep hole which has been dug in the center of the site and the stacking of bricks and bags of cement on timbers placed over the hole. According to the boss man a test is being made to determine the condition of the soil on which the foundation of the new building will be erected.
After excavating to the depth that will be required for the foundation, a large platform has been placed on the bottom of the pit with a frame work of timbers reaching above the ground on which has been placed several thousand pounds of weight. A check is made each day to determine how much the weighted base has settled. From these readings engineers will be able to work out the style of base needed for the new building.

Governor Cherry, in a proclamation has set aside September 2 - third anniversary of the end of World War II - "as a forcible reminder of the terrific price paid for victory." He urged North Carolinians to observe a 30 second period of silence, starting at 8:59 a.m. that day and "otherwise give fitting tribute to those who achieved victory."
