Research on Better Housing for Low Income Groups Under Way in South

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Better housing for low-income families is the object of a research project now under way at Southern Research institute, which is described in the institute's summer bulletin just issued.

Sponsored by the institute itself, the project aims at the design of a basic dwelling unit, combining all essential features of a home, that can be built at minimum cost, with practically all construction done without skilled labor. While still in an experimental stage, engineers at Southern Research institute have worked out designs for a home which estimates show can be built of home-made blocks for a total cost including plumbing, bathroom and electric pump of approximately $900.

The plan includes two nine-by-twelve foot bedrooms, a nine-by-fourteen foot living room, a small bathroom, and a combination kitchen and dining space. It is hoped that the project may result in lifting living standards of families in rural areas, who are now occupying dwellings that fail to meet minimum standards of shelter, sanitation and durability.

The first sample house is being built in Tuskegee because the Tuskegee institute there has already shown interest in low-cost housing. R. C. Johnson, institute plant engineer in charge of the project, goes to Tuskegee regularly to inspect progress of the first house.

A close check is being kept on all expenses and on the amount of man hours involved in the construction.

From these figures the Institute plans to make a comprehensive report to its trustees on the history of this house and its possible widespread use in the South. It is hoped by the institute that philanthropic sponsors may eventually be found to disseminate information among the Southern rural population on how to build the low-cost houses now being investigated.

"Olympics" of Woodcraft

To Woodmen, the Uniform Rank is one of the most important units of the local Woodmen Camp. Its colorful drills and floor work are indispensable to Woodmen rites and interesting features of social and public programs.

Attention of all Woodmen therefore was centered on the National Encampment . . . the "Olympics" of the Uniform Rank . . . at Hot Springs, Ark., August 29 to September 4, that determined the national champion degree teams in military drill and floor work.

The Uniform Rank is another of the "extras" enjoyed by Woodmen along with their safe, sound Woodmen life insurance protection. Ask the local Woodmen representative to explain how you can enjoy these benefits of Woodcraft.
