First Baptist Church, Beaufort, To Observe Youth Day Sunday

What might happen some Sunday if no adults showed up at church? The answer to this question will be found next Sunday at the Beaufort First Baptist church in all services (beginning with Sunday School), when Youth Day will be observed.

Indeed, this might be called "Teen Age Day", since police precautions caused its delay and college students have returned to school, thus leaving the situation pretty much in the hands of high school youngsters.

Sunday at both services (11:00 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.) everything, except occupying the pews, will be done by the youth of the church. Adults will be conspicuous by their absence from the choir, the console, the ushering posts, and the pulpit. The men and women will warm the pews while the young people take over.

At the evening worship the meditations will be illustrated by famous works of religious art upon the screen, and the congregational singing will also be from the screen.

Members of the Training Union will celebrate the reopening of this work by a picnic supper and social hour at the hut on the church yard at 5:30. This supper will be provided by the ladies of the W.M.S.

Services at Portsmouth will commemorate a homecoming in honor of those who once lived on Portsmouth Island, the Rev. Mr. Tilley has announced.

"We hope that in bringing these people home again that old times will be reviewed," he remarked, and glad hearts rejoice that they still have an old home to which to come.

He continued, "Since the church is a dear spot to most of the citizens, there is no better way to celebrate homecoming than in prayer and in thanksgiving in the little church which stands out above all others on this unique island."

"Members of the church are especially invited to be present. We like to discuss ways and means of bringing the church to par for preference recognition. Nothing would revive the island more than to begin with the church."

"Let as many of the church members come as will. All others are invited," he concluded.
