JOURNEY JOTTINGS

Arriving at Montreal Sunday night, we spent two days in this Canadian city where more French is spoken than English. Especially in the older part of the city the store and street signs are all in French. By using our hands, pointing and jabbering, we were able to make our wants known.

Montreal has much of interest for its visitors. It can rightly be called a city of churches and universities. Here is located the noted McGill University of Montreal. Chief among its churches are St. James Cathedral, Church of the Archdiocese of Montreal, Church of Notre Dame de Ville-Marie. The most of interest is Saint Joseph's Oratory, better known as Brother Andre's Shrine.

The crypt and basilica form a grand pyramid of over four hundred feet on the eastern slope of Mount Royal. This beautiful structure was erected in memory of Brother Andre, known to many, who during the life of this "Miracle Man of Montreal," were healed of their infirmities. In the crypt near the tomb of Brother Andre stands a myriad of crutches and other remnants of human miseries, all of them left by the firm who were cured through the intercession of Saint Joseph.

The Musee Historique is said to be the finest wax museum in the world. The museum contains scenes depicting, with life-size wax figures, the history of the primitive church, Biblical scenes, as well as dioramas portraying early events of the history of Canada. The wax figures, over 200 of them, are so life-like that visitors often expect to see them rise, or hear them speak. The exhibit is placed in what seems an underground corridor, representing the catacombs of Rome which were used by early Christians as shelter and gathering places at the time of the Roman persecutions.

From the beauty of the shrine and the wonders of the museum we ascended Mount Royal in a horse drawn surrey to get a magnificent view of the city, the river and in the distance across the river to the south, the Adirondock mountains.

On this lofty mountain has been erected an immense cross, visible for miles, and aglow at night, visible for miles by the returning sailors coming up the river. They know that when they sight this cross, the prayers of their folks in the Notre Dame de Bonsecours, known as the Mariner's Shrine, have been answered.

With lasting memories of our visit to Montreal we turn our face southward across the river to the good old U.S.A. Before we can cross the border, custom officials give us the once over, ask a few questions, dig into our baggage and let us go our way.

Heading down the Hudson valley for Albany we pass through historical country. For many miles one follows along the shore of Lake Champlain. Off to the east across the lake are the green mountains of Vermont while on the west are the Adirondacks. The trees have taken on their autumn coloring, giving the mountain sides a riot of color.

Fort Ticonderoga at the foot of the lake played a part in the Revolutionary War. It was here in 1775, a small force of Americans, known as the "Green Mountain Boys" under Ethan Allen, demanded the British commander of the fort to surrender "in the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress," capturing the fort. After the beginning of the Revolutionary War, the whole region bordering on Lake Champlain, Lake George, and the Hudson became a battleground.

At Glenn Falls as one looks westward to the mountains they can see the American flag flying from Mount McGregor. It was there that General U. S. Grant spent the last days, dying of cancer of the throat. His remains, as well as those of Mrs. Grant, rest in the beautiful tomb on Riverside Drive in New York City.

On the banks of the Hudson at Schreyleville stand a most imposing monument, commemorating the Battle of Saratoga. About the base of the monument at the four corners are niches, in three of which have been placed bronze figures of leading generals of this battle. The fourth niche contains no figure but only the name Benedict Arnold. Instead of placing a figure to his memory for his service to his country, his name has been written in letters of infamy on the page of American

Durham Market Breaks Record

COLLEGE STATION, Raleigh—The 18-year-old Durham county home demonstration curb market has broken all sales records this summer, with a sales total of $7,141.74 reported for July alone, reports Miss Virginia Patrick, home demonstration agent for the State College Extension Service.

On Saturday, August 14, the market hit a new daily high with produce sold by 60 persons bringing a total of $1,503.15, Miss Patrick said.

Indications are that sales for 1948 will exceed the record total of $57,577.09 reached in 1945, the home agent stated. Last year, the market led the State with sales amounting to $46,534.43.

Since 1930, according to Miss Patrick, a total of 627 families have sold produce on the curb market.

The number of sellers during the past six weeks has averaged 59 per Saturday. The Wednesday afternoon sales, conducted this year for the first time, have grown from a total of $70.93 on June 2 to $243.23 on August 11. An average of 13 sellers offer produce at the mid-week sales.

Of the $7,141.74 sales total in July, vegetables accounted for a total of $2,230.58; poultry, $2,120.91; and eggs, $1,095.89. Other products offered included butter, meat, bread, cake, flowers, fruits and berries, canned products, handicraft, and miscellaneous articles.

The Durham market has had visitors from Lenoir, Granville, Forsythe, Wake, Rockingham, Pender, and Wilkes counties in North Carolina, and it has been inspected by city officials from Greenville, S. C., and a marketing specialist from the Texas Extension Service.

His Master's Voice

SYDNEY, Australia — (AP) — When his hunting dogs began disturbing his rest, a Sydney race-horse trainer put a loudspeaker in their kennels and connected it to the public address system he uses to reach his employees. Now when the dogs bark in the middle of the night, he whispers, "Lie down," and they stop.
