'47 Farm Fires Cost 100 Million

COLLEGE STATION, Raleigh—Pointing out that farm fires last year cost 100 million dollars, killed 3,900 farm residents, and injured thousands, H. M. Ellis, Extension agricultural engineering specialist at State College, today urged rural North Carolinians to take an active part in National Fire Prevention Week, October 3-9.

"Ninety per cent of all farm fires are preventable," Mr. Ellis declared. "Each rural family should attempt to eliminate all 'fire traps' around the farm and home, and thus reduce the staggering losses in human life and property which are sustained each year."

Information from the National Board of Fire Underwriters reveals that lightning is the leading cause of farm fires, accounting for 37 per cent of the total, Mr. Ellis said. He added that lightning rods of the right size and material properly installed and maintained on every farm building will eliminate this particular fire menace as well as protect the occupants of the buildings.

Defective chimneys, flues, and stovepipes rank second as the cause of farm fires, the specialist asserted. "Repair cracks and other defects with cement mortar," he urged. "Replace rusted or burned-out stovepipes. Clean chimneys each fall. Install double metal ventilated thimbles where stovepipes pass through combustible walls or partitions."

Mr. Ellis listed other steps for reducing farm fires as follows: Use spark arrester on chimney. Never use gasoline or kerosene to start or hasten a fire. Never bring any volatile flammable liquid into the home—especially for dry cleaning.

Inspect electric wiring and installations often, and keep them in good condition.

Make frequent inspections of newly stored hay or grain until danger of "heating" has passed.

Keep all oil, grease, or paint soaked rags in metal covered containers. Store paint and paint material in a safe place.

Handle matches and cigarettes with care.
