There's enough stored power in these merchant ships to move the products of our factories and plants in peace time or in war. Yes, these standing ships could load and unload a good part of our country's exports and sail to all parts of the world.

But this is latent power. Power that is just waiting to be used. Reddy Kilowatt, and the Tide Water Power Company have power already being used . . . lots of power, and Tide Water also has a great load of latent power.
