Two Pairs of Male Twins Over 80 and Going Strong

South Windham, Me. (AP)—This farming community offers a double rebuttal to mortality tables that indicate twins don't live as long as folks born singly.

Mace F. Willis and his brother, Morse, are 80. Neighbors Eugene and Augustine Hawkes are over 84. All four men are active farmers or gardeners and they have one other experience in common—they're alumni of Windham's old "Horse Beef" school—officially the Mallison street school.

Horse Beef school got its name from its district, where a store once received a barrel of beef that contained a horse's leg, complete with iron shoe.

Teacher Carried Gun

In the school days of Gene and Gus Hawkes, several 20-year-old "boys" were classmates and the male teacher found it expedient to carry a revolver.

Gus and Alice Whittier Hawkes observed their 64th wedding anniversary last March. Gene Hawkes and Mary Bodge were married in 1894. Morse and Mace Willis have each married twice.

After leaving school, the Hawkes brothers became partners in a carriage shop. The project was dissolved for economic reasons when carriages became a thing of the past. Gus turned to paperhanging a power company and later an express company. He was also a paper company payroll man.

In Good Health Except for typhoid fever in their boyhood, neither brother has been seriously ill. Gene recently had a physical check and he reported "the doctor didn't leave me any medicine."

The Willis boys live on adjoining farms. Morse in the house his father built for him 50 years ago and Mace in the family homestead. The Willis brothers also raise beef cattle and train oxen for lumber operations.

Mace has been deaf because of an attack of spinal meningitis when he was 2.

Morse says he's too busy to think about retiring. He's boss at the sawmill he has operated for 50 years and runs a real estate and building-moving business.
