Mint Boss Loves Her Job; Big Change from Teaching

Denver (AP)—Sometimes people, give Mrs. Gladys Morelock a knowing smile when they're told she is the first woman to become superintendent of a U. S. mint.

They are likely to ask: How about Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross at Washington?

Well, Mrs. Ross happens to be Mrs. Morelock's boss because, as director of the mint, she supervises all three of Uncle Sam's money factories. This leaves Mrs. Morelock, a tiny, trim brunette with grey-tinged hair and alert brown eyes, as the first woman mint superintendent in history.

She was appointed by the president on Aug. 1 to the $10,800 a year position as head of Denver's mint. At 48, it was a change for the former school teacher. Her husband, a doctor, died two years ago.

Mrs. Morelock has been active in Democratic politics for a long time—she was vice chairman of the state central committee for one four-year period—but this is her first paid government job.

"I love it," she said with enthusiasm. "In fact, I guess I get down earlier in the morning than I really have to, and stay around later in the evening. Also, I make a lot of trips into various parts of the mint. There's so much to learn."

Mrs. Morelock supervises more than 200 employees, most of them men, and said they are "most friendly and helpful" even though they "naturally wondered whether Rotate the use of the burners or units of your range instead of using any one more than all the others. When through using the oven, leave the door ajar while it cools. This will allow moisture to escape and reduce the tendency to rust. To keep a range in good condition, it is important to keep all parts clean, free from greasy food particles.

Good quick supper: Heat canned baked beans and serve them with small browned pork sausage links and cole slaw.
