

Ann Street Methodists Break Ground for Education Building

Photos by Jerry Schumacher

Indication of the cooperative action which has been taken to get the N. F. Eure Educational Building underway is the brigade of officials who turned the first spadeful of earth on the site Sunday morning. They are, left to right, Mrs. N. F. Eure, the Rev. J. D. Young, pastor, who's giving Mrs. Eure a bit of advice on how to dig, Thomas Eure, whose eyes are twinkling at his mother's efforts and who is head of the building committee; W. H. Potter, chairman of the central steering committee; Braxton Adair, chairman of the board of trustees; Leslie Moore, Sunday School superintendent during the start of the building program; E. W. Downum, Sunday School superintendent; and Lance Smith, chairman of the commission on education.

The ground-breaking ceremony for the N. F. Eure Educational Building, Ann Street Methodist Church, on Sunday marked the beginning of a building program which will cost more than $166,000.

The ceremony followed a half an hour church service. Spadesful of earth were turned shortly before noon as a warm June sun shone down and a cooling southwest breeze played through the large trees which shade the building site.

The structure will stand on Ann Street, east of Craven, and across the street from the Lottie Sanders Building.

Mr. Eure, after whom it is named, was for 20 years superintendent of the Sunday School, was active in all church programs, served on the official church board for more than 40 years, and died May 23, 1955 while serving as chairman of the building committee for the new educational building.

The ground-breaking service was conducted by the Rev. J. D. Young, pastor, with the choir and congregation participating.

During the service, Thomas Eure, son of N. F. Eure, expressed the family's appreciation for naming the building in honor of his father.

Lance Smith, chairman of the commission on education, paid tribute to Fred R. Seeley who had contributed time, money and interest toward the building program. Mr. Seeley is in the hospital and was not present at the ceremony.

Mr. Smith announced that in honor of Mr. Seeley and his splendid contribution toward the building of the church over the years, the O'Bryan house would in the future be known as the Fred R. Seeley Building. The O'Bryan house, at Ann and Craven, is now used for Sunday School classrooms.

Mr. Smith was in charge of arrangements for the ground-breaking and the picnic. The Sunday school furnished paper plates and forks and the Wesleyan Guild prepared two barrels of lemonade.

18-Year-Old Meal Ticket Still Serviceable

Canton, Okla. (AP) — Back in 1938 Rene Heinz, working here with the Oklahoma Highway Department, bought a meal ticket at a cafe.

He didn't have time to use it all up before being shifted to another job. He revisited the cafe recently, pulled out the meal ticket and got the unused portion redeemed.

Heinz got a surprise when he was served by the same waitress who issued it 18 years ago.
