Two Institute Staff Members Lecture at UNC

Dr. Austin B. Williams and Dr. Earl F. Deubler Jr., of the University of North Carolina Institute of Fisheries Research lectured to the marine ecology class of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill last Monday and Wednesday.

Dr. Williams discussed the forces of nature which tend to regulate the numbers of living things. Using the commercial shrimp as one example, he showed how each species has the capacity to produce many more young than can possibly reach maturity.

Being eaten by other fish, injury, disease, extremes of weather, and being taken in trawls all work together to reduce the numbers of shrimp that can survive to spawn.

Similar forces reduce the number of other animals. Dr. Williams emphasized that the reproductive capacity and the destructive forces are usually in balance, thus the relative numbers tend to remain about the same from year to year.

The discussion concluded with a review of the regular predictable, cyclical changes in abundance of some Arctic animals such as the lemmings and foxes, and Arctic hares and lynxes. Records of the 10-year "boom and bust" cycles in hares and lynxes have been kept by the Hudson Bay Co. for over 100 years.

Dr. Deubler discussed the importance which environmental factors such as temperature and salinity play in controlling growth and body form in fishes. He pointed out that fishes, being cold-blooded animals, are very closely associated with their environment, and, as a result, changes which occur in the environment may be accom-

Stanley Woodland speaks to theatre

City. Mr. Woodland was introduced by Glenn Adair, dinner chairman. Mr. Woodland told of touring the west in the early 1920's and seeing various amateur theatre productions. He mentioned visits to New England summer theatres and commented that "Broadway is no longer the voice of the American theatre".

The community theatre, the speaker commented, has taken root in American soil, providing cultural background, motivating people, developing potential professional actors and actresses, and making friends of those who participate in and those who see the amateur productions. He suggested that the Carteret theatre present dramas with local folklore background, such as tales of the sea.

The theatre's next regular meeting, the first of the new year, will be at 8 Wednesday night, April 9. Anyone interested in any phase of theatre work is invited. Place is the recreation building between 13th and 16th Streets on Evans in Morehead City.

Questions

Answer: It's a group of persons appointed from each school district in the county: Atlantic, Smyrna, Beaufort, Morehead City and Newport.

8. Who appointed them? Answer: Members of the county board of education.

9. Is this committee supposed to decide how schools should be built and where?

Answer: This committee can recommend as to school buildings. But it also is to study the courses offered in schools, determine whether courses could be increased in number, see how new schools can be paid for, and study the extra-curricular programs, such as clubs, student government, sports, and other phases of the public school system.

10. Who thought up this idea for a Citizens Committee for Better Schools?

Answer: Gov. Luther Hodges in January 1957 appointed a state Citizens Committee for Better Schools. Since that time similar committees have been organized in counties and cities throughout the state.

11. Do the people on this committee get paid?

Answer: No. They have accepted the appointment and their reward, if any, will be better schools for our children.

12. Why did this committee have to be appointed? Couldn't the Parent-Teacher organizations study these problems?

Answer: Parent-Teacher organizations fill a need in a particular local school. But at the present time, Carteret County, like lots of other counties is faced with making a major decision on how its future public school education program shall go.

If a major building program is to be undertaken, it must be financed on a county level. This requires a "meeting of the minds" from all sections of the county, for every citizen, whether he has children in school or not, is involved as a taxpayer.

13. If we decide to build new schools, will our taxes go up?

Answer: This is something a "finance" committee of the Citizens Committee for Better Schools would have to study. Educators and tax officials believe that there will have to be some increase in
