Women Getting Wage Equality

United Nations, N. Y. (AP)—The world's women, under the banner "equal work, equal pay," are making steady progress in the long battle for wage equality with men.

A report by the International Labor Organization (ILO), prepared annually to provide information on the results of efforts by UN members to eliminate wage discrimination against women, shows wage discrimination against women still exists but is being slowly reduced.

Equal Pay Bills
In the United States, congressional hearings are expected this year on some of the many federal equal pay bills introduced by women lawmakers.

On the state level, the State Federations of Business and Professional Women's Clubs are playing a big role. In Wisconsin and Ohio equal pay bills have been introduced by federation members.

In New York and Pennsylvania the state federations have been working to revise existing equal pay legislation to enforce the extension of coverage to all employees.

California passed a strengthening amendment to equal pay legislation last year and Nebraska adopted a resolution favoring it.

In Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Ohio, Utah and Wisconsin, equal pay bills were introduced. In Illinois, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania, amendments were introduced with a view to improve existing legislation on equal pay.
