The Eagle Eye is upon you!

By ROMELDA SHEPPARD
The junior class of MCHS is beginning to look like busy beavers as they progress with the planning for the not-too-far-away Junior-Senior Banquet "Mum's the word" on the whole operation whenever a senior appears.

However, a great deal of progress is being made. The "chief beaver" of the decorating committee is our over-all chairman, Barry Willis. Under him are several small committees assigned to special jobs. Some of these committee chairmen are Guy Sabiston, Wendy Lowe, Bruce Goodwin, and Jerry Garner.

As preparations move into full swing, the tension and excitement grow. Yes, seniors, we juniors are very "tight-lipped" about our plans but we promise you this: This year's banquet will be one you will never forget!

Science Fair
In view of the annual science fair, Alice Dixon interviewed Clarence Styron, first place winner in the bacteriological division, on his winning project, Distribution and Interpretation of Bacterial Pollution in a Tidal Estuary.

How excited Clarence Styron must have been when his Science Fair project was judged first place in the biological division! What a perfect climax to two months of constant work and research! March 27, 1958, was most certainly a "red letter" day for Clarence: it marked not only the end of his labor on his science project, Distribution and Interpretation of Bacterial Pollution in a Tidal Estuary; but on this day he became one of the few fortunate enough to travel to Greenville with their Science Fair exhibits.

When the public views these exhibits, they only see the results of many tedious hours of hard work; they do not see the "blood, sweat, and tears," so to speak, which have gone into the project. They do not know the amount of sacrifice and, many times, heartbreak which have gone into the project. Often their first thought is, "No wonder his project is so good. He's a 'brain'!"

Well, perhaps there's a grain of truth in that thought. It does take brains to compose a project such as Clarence's; but it took a great deal more than that: courage, willpower, interest, enthusiasm, and perseverance.

When Clarence started his project, he knew nothing at all about the subject. To be true, he "started from scratch." Long before he started his project, he had seen his friend, Mrs. Harvell, who works at the Institute of Fisheries, working with bacteria cultures and had become remotely interested in what she was doing. When the time came to begin work on the Science Fair projects, he decided it might be interesting to work with bacteria; and from this thought he built his first-place winner.

After he started his project, he became so interested in bacteriology that he is now considering it as a career. Prior to his work on his project, his main interest had been medicine. Perhaps this Science Fair has produced a future bacteriologist!

Naturally, since Clarence was starting from scratch, there was a formidable amount of research work to be done and a great deal of technique-knowledge to be acquired before he could even collect water samples. Also, he had to decide what to look for and, then, where to find it.

After doing some research, and after much thought, Clarence decided to look for the number of coliform bacteria per one hundred milliliters of water and the salinity content of the water.

Clarence began research work with books loaned to him by Mrs. Harvell, Dr. Posner, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Parrish, his science advisors. These people were also extremely willing to answer questions—and there were many—and offer advice.

When Clarence had learned something about his subject, he

County Doctors Honored

At Saturday Night Party
Members of the County Medical Society were honored by the Medical Auxiliary at a dinner party at Rex Restaurant Saturday night. The party was given in honor of Doctors' day, which was Sunday.

The tables were decorated with arrangements of red carnations and each doctor was presented a boutonniere upon arrival.

Coast Guard Wives Will Organize Club Monday

Wives of Coast Guardsmen, whether on active duty or retired, are invited to attend a coffee hour at 7:30 Monday night at St. Egbert's Catholic School.

The purpose of the coffee hour is to organize the Coast Guard Wives Club.

he barely had time to do his homework! But, through this deluge of work, he had a purpose: to learn something about bacteriology and to produce a worthy exhibit.

Although the materials Clarence had to buy came to less than ten dollars—the most expensive things he had to buy were the magic markers he used to color his map—the exhibit you saw was priceless. No one can estimate the value of the knowledge Clarence gained, and no one can estimate the value of the thrill everyone received viewing his exhibit. We all owe Clarence a pat on the back for a job well done.

Mrs. David P. Willis Entertains Bridge Club

Mrs. David P. Willis entertained the Tuesday bridge club at her home this week. She had as guests Mrs. Silas Thorne and Mrs. Ed Faucette.

Mrs. Thorne was high scorer. Mrs. Milton Morey was second high and Mrs. Robert Freeman was low.

During progressions the hostess served colas, nuts and candies. At the conclusion of play she served lemon pie.

The club will meet in three weeks with Mrs. J. R. Sanders.

Mrs. Waldron Bailly III Entertains Bridge Club

Mrs. Waldron Bailly III was hostess to her bridge club Wednesday evening at her home. Refreshments of brownies, colas and coffee were served.

High score was won by Mrs. Bill Singleton and low was won by Mrs. Jerry Norris.

Mrs. Sam Gibbs will entertain the club next week at her home.

Girl Scout Troop 226 Meets at Parish House

Girl Scout troop 226 met at the Episcopal parish house Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Edgar Swann checked our Girl Scout notebooks.

We drew weather maps, flags and lights. Frances served the refreshments. We ended our meeting with the friendship circle.
