Beaufort Juniors, Seniors Prepare For Annual Banquet Tonight

Excitement in the air this past week has been as alive as electri-city. Everyone has agreed that no week could possibly pass at a slower pace. Chalkdust could innumerous flowery phrases explaining the reason for all the commotion going on but just three words will suffice — Junior-Senior banquet.

For the juniors, tonight will be the climax of two long months of planning, arranging, and hard work — with the hope in mind that theirs will be the best banquet yet. Each year there is a lot of discussion as to = whether the present junior class can outdo the previous juniors. Most of us seniors feel Lou as Mary Temple when she said. Well, it might [] be scrumptious

Despite these customary marks, tonight is destined long remembered one, simply because it is our Junior-Senior We seniors thank you in advance, juniors. The expressions thrill and surprise on the faces of your guests as they enter the Bilt-more's ballroom tonight, will best express their appreciation.

Late in March fourth year English classes began their study of Shakespeare's well known play, Macbeth. Anyone having read this play may recall that it is concern against committing criminal acts to gain the goals his natural am-bitions yearn for. It is considered Shakespeare's greatest tragedy and the plot is one of weird mystery and excite-ment, brim full of witches, murders, ghosts and wars.

The classes had such fun reading the parts of the various char-acters that they decided they'd like to see how real professionals would do the play. As always Mr. Tarkington took great interest in the seniors' re-quest — this time to order Orson Wells' film version of Macbeth. He not only ordered that film but arfor Macbeth and Julius Caesar which the sophomores are studying, to be shown to the whole

The Macbeth movie arrived Friday and being over an hour long, was shown in the auditorium during first and second periods. To cover the cost of the movie, 20 cents was set as an admission cents was set as an admission charge — all profits to be donated to the library fund. Judging from the huge crowd that attended the showing, Mrs. Fodrie should have received quite a cache of money for new books.

The written version of the play was difficult enough to understand, so it was no wonder that many of the underclassmen sat dumbfo Shakespeare's mighty passages.

Upon reaching Macbeth's speech where the murderer laments the uselessnes of life, the seniors got quite a thrill from being able to recite the "Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow" passage along with the famous actor.

The showing of such films as this certainly is to the advantage of any student. It gives them a much clearer picture of the settings, time, and characters as Shakespeare meant them to be interpreted. Everyone is looking forward to seeing the Julius Caesar play which will be shown soon.

Mr. Gordon also expressed his thanks to Frances Bell for her job as the team's manager and H. D. Paul for his continuous assistance. As the applause died after Mr. Gordon's part in the ceremonies Mr. McQuaid proceeded to the ros-trum and began his annual "nodating - for - the - boys - during basketball" talk. Each year dur ing his talk, Mr. McQuaid man-ages to have at least five students turn a blushing red. This practice is just part of the fun and "Coach" does compliment his "guys".
