

State College To Teach Three Courses Here

Raleigh—Three North Carolina State College short courses will move from the campus to the coast during the month of June.

Morehead City will be host to the 27th annual meter school, June 3-8; the annual surveyors' short course, the week of June 16; and the two-week cotton classing short course, June 16-27.

Instructional sessions of all three courses will be held in the Camp Glenn elementary school.

The meter school is offered annually by the State College electrical engineering department and college extension division.

The program is divided into three sections: single phase for new students, polyphase for second year students or for those who have had the equivalent, and an advanced section for those who have completed both sections or the equivalent.

The purpose of the course is to get meter department personnel together to discuss their mutual problems and to bring to them new and standard practices in the field.

Surveyors, during their five-day course, study new techniques and more efficient methods of field practice.

The State College department of civil engineering conducts this course in cooperation with the college extension division.

Ginners, buyers, and classifiers in the cotton classing field will hear A. M. Hodgins of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Cotton Examiners, Raleigh; Vernon Hill, ginning and marketing specialist of the N.C. Department of Agriculture; and Glenn Tussey, extension cotton marketing specialist of the N.C. State College staff.

In addition to covering universal cotton standards, the group will receive training in the use of the micronaire and other fibre tests will be discussed.

The Eagle Eye is upon you!

By ROMELDA SHEPPARD

Recognition for literary ability came to two MCHS students this week.

Rendezvous, a short story by Llewellyn Phillips, was one of the 33 winning entries in the good writing competition sponsored by the North Carolina English Teachers Association. It is published in the April Student Issue.

Fred Willis Jr. was district winner in an essay contest on Vision and Highway Safety. Fred's composition was an assignment in physical education class, under the direction of coach Norman Clark.

Fred has received a $50 award and his essay is now in competition on the state level with those from five other districts.

The winning selections follow:

RENDEZVOUS

Llewellyn Phillips

"The beach looks different in the winter," he thought.

The rain was falling in a steady drizzle as he stepped down from the drenched boardwalk onto the cold, wet sand. He pulled his collar up around his neck, but that did nothing to diminish the cold lost feeling deep inside him.

He began walking towards the hill now. Two steps later he turned around and looked at the deserted tract behind him.

A few abandoned stands, their open doors flapping in the wind, greeted his mute gaze. Here and there a bit of something was whipped along by the wind, and disappeared erratically around a corner. The rain drowned out the noise that he knew wasn't there.

"How lifeless it is," he thought. "How dead and lifeless it is."

Then his legs were weak, and he sat down on a weather-worn log in the sand. He lowered his head into his hands and stared at the sand between his feet. The rain dripped off the log and swirled over a minute hill of sand which was—and then wasn't.

"Everything changes; nothing ever remains the same for any length of time," he mused.

"She won't come. I don't suppose that I really expected her to. Two years is a long time, and many things have happened since that summer here. How I wish those years were mine again! But they're not, and I well know that. Time is a barrier. It has come and gone—and that's all there is to it. It was good of her to offer to try again. She won't be here, though. That's funny! Did I ever think she would?"

A handful of sand suddenly whipped his face and brought him from his nostalgic thoughts.

"Just one more look at our hill before I go," he thought.

The fading light heralded the end of day, already hurried by the interminable rain. He pulled himself to his feet, for he knew that he had to stand on the hill before he left.

It was the highest hill on the beach. "The nearest to heaven," she had once said. He laughed bitterly as he began the climb. The sand slipped quietly from under his feet and once he had to catch himself with his hands to keep from falling.

Everything was ugly now as he stared impassively from the hill. It was nothing like those days that they had once shared here together.

The rain fell faster now, and he stumbled heedlessly to the bottom of the hill. He ran rapidly from the rendezvous; but just before he left he turned back and scanned the shore, their hill, and the dismal sky. Then he closed his eyes and vowed fervently that he would never again return...

When she arrived, the rain was washing the last of his footprints from the sand.

VISION AND HIGHWAY SAFETY

By Fred S. Willis Jr.

What would you think of someone who left a loaded and cocked gun within the easy reach of small children? Undoubtedly your opinion of him would not be very high.

Recently, in New York City, a man was issued a renewal of his driver's license, although he could not see how to get to the window! He was almost totally blind, yet he got his driver's license without any trouble.

It is pathetic that only three states out of the forty-eight require an eye examination whenever a license is renewed. These are Colorado, Iowa, and North Carolina. If we are to make our highways safe, we must require in all the states a re-examination of eyes whenever a license is renewed.

Just to have 20/20 acuity vision is not enough. Most drivers, because they have 20/20 vision, think that their eyes are perfect. This isn't always true. People who have "tunnel vision" may be able to see perfectly well to the front, but to the side they cannot see well. Only fifteen states test for this defect when someone is applying for a driver's license.

Depth perception is also very important, especially in passing. The person with this defect cannot judge the distance of objects properly. Only eleven states require this examination.

Over 15 per cent of all highway accidents are traced to a visual defect on the part of the driver. If you live in a state where a strict visual examination is not required, you can have your eyes tested on your own. One out of every six drivers who has some type of eye defect, is not aware of that defect. Most eye defects can be corrected if they are discovered in time.

Two-thirds of our highway accidents occur at night. Proper night vision is essential for all drivers. Many accidents at night can be prevented by using common sense. For instance, you should never wear sun-glasses at night because they reduce visibility. Tinted windshields also reduce visibility, and allowances should be made for them.

Common sense should tell you to drive more slowly and keep a sharper lookout at night. You should use your headlights properly. The ability to resist glare decreases with age. If you are an older person, be extra careful.

On a dark highway clear vision is limited to the beam of your headlights. Most headlights are not good beyond two hundred and fifty feet.

The old excuse, "I didn't see!" is no longer adequate in case of an accident. If you drive, it is your business to see. Today, inadequate vision is an entirely unnecessary handicap to safe driving. Adequate vision is the most important aspect of driving. Yet it is the least important part of a driver's examination.

What can we do about it? As

FHA Meets

At a meeting of the Future Homemakers at the Morehead City High School on Friday, the following officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Geri Reid; vice-president, Barbara Nichols; secretary, Jo Ann Lockhart; treasurer, Lynette McBride.

Reporter, Barbara Saratowski; parliamentarian, Doris Farmer; historian, Linda Lockhart; song leader, Carita Lockhart; pianist, Janice Lovick.

The installation service will take place before the school year closes.

New Tri-Hi-Y Members

On Wednesday, April 9, the Morehead City High School Tri-Hi-Y was in charge of the chapel program, an induction service for new members. The members, dressed in white blouses and black skirts, were on the stage as the student body entered the auditorium.

Judy Cooper was in charge of devotions. The vice-president, Jenny Lou Smithwick, and the treasurer, Janet Thomas, explained the origin of Tri-Hi-Y and the emblem. The senior members then tapped the incoming members. They are as follows:

Becky Stiles, Carita Lockhart, Betsy Willis, Sue Bordeaux, Donna Guthrie, Jean Byrd, Linda Lockhart, Barbara Roush, Nancy Capps, Kathy Chalk.

Doris Farmer, Nancy Laughton, Mary Hanes, Virginia Thompson, Alva Hodges, Barbara Saratowski, Brenda Wetherington, Anna Faye Willis, Catherine Lohr.

After having been installed, the new members took their places on the stage among their fellow members. The service was closed as the members sang the club song, I Would Be True.

Mansfield Park Residents To Vote in Morehead

The county board of commissioners voted at their March meeting to create a separate voting precinct in Mansfield Park, but C. Z. Chappell, chairman of the elections board, said that the commissioners probably misunderstood what the elections board had in mind.

He said the elections board deems it advisable to include Mansfield Park with Morehead precinct No. 2. No separate precinct will be established.

Good News About

By Harry Venters, 4-H Advisor

The third 4-H Electric Workshop will be held tonight at the Carteret-Craven Electric Membership Corp. building in Morehead City at 7:30. This workshop will also be repeated in Newport at the PTA Center, Saturday morning, Mr. Norris Edge, of Carolina Power and Light Co., and Mr. Bernie Morton of the Carteret-Craven Electric Membership, will again serve as instructors.

This is the last in this series of workshops, with the exception of a trip that will be given to those who attended these workshops. Carolina Power and Light Co. will take those with perfect attendance to Wilmington where they will see electricity made at the generating plant there.

The 4-H Health Improvement Record Books are to be completed and turned in at the May club meetings. Health is not considered as a 4-H Project but as an activity that every 4-H'er must participate in.

There are four main objectives of the 4-H Health Program.

1. To develop leadership talents and to work toward achieving the broad objectives of character and effective citizenship.
2. To learn that happy living—(physical and mental fitness, attractive appearance and a pleasing personality) — depends upon health conservation and improvement.
3. To develop desirable personal health practices and attitudes.
4. To share in the responsibility for improving the health of the family and of the community.

The Health Improvement Record book outlines many ways of accomplishing these objectives. Suggestions on improving your own personal health habits, your family's and also things to be done that will improve the community health are all found in this record book. Mrs. Garner and I are looking for some really good reports this year to choose the Junior and Senior Health Kings and Queens from.

The boys and girls submitting the best records will be given a physical examination to determine the Health Kings and Queens. I know that our Senior Health King and Queen from last year, Gordon Becton and Peggy Cannon, are going to have real competition in their defense of the title.

The Junior and Senior Health King and Queen will be awarded gold-filled medals of honor. In addition, the Senior King and Queen will go to State 4-H Club Week in Raleigh to participate in the Health Revue. A state health winner will be selected here and will be given an all-expense paid trip to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

Junior and Intermediate 4-H girls are busy these days practicing their baking techniques. These are girls who are participating in the Junior 4-H Enriched Corn Meal Muffin program, and are getting ready for school and county competition.

Miss Jo Earp, extension nutritionist, who is in charge of this program on a state level, recommends that all participants use the same recipe, since girls who take part in the district and state activity will be required to do so.

The recommended recipe will be found on page 10 of Cornmeal Cookery, Hoes, Whys and Recipes. Copies of this booklet were given to participants at April 4-H Club meetings. The recipe is given here:

- Corn Meal Muffins
2 cups enriched Corn Meal
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar (optional)

- 1 egg
- 1 1/4 cups sweet milk
- 3 tablespoons soft or melted fat

1. Set oven control to 450 degrees F. for oven to pre-heat.
2. Sift together meal, baking powder and salt.
3. Mix together beaten egg, milk and fat.
4. Add all at once to the dry ingredients.
5. Stir just to moisten and blend all ingredients.
6. Pour the batter into hot greased muffin tins, filling about 2/3 full.
7. Pop quickly into pre-heated oven.
8. Bake for 15-20 minutes.

Note: For corn sticks bake in stick molds; for corn bread, bake in shallow pan 9"x9"x2". Participants in the Corn Meal Cookery Contest, are reminded to bring a sample of their cornbread to their May club meetings.

and everyone took full advantage of this rare opportunity. One of the most exciting moments of the banquet came when the dancers gathered around the band stand to urge the musicians on in a real jazzy session.

By 11:30 the hosts hostesses, and guests began to feel the results of so much excitement and dancing. By midnight they all bid farewell to the fairland world and ended their rendezvous with the stars.

Gathering in the library for their April meeting Friday, Lambda Chi members elected their new officers for next year.

Mary Lou Temple, president of the club, announced the candidates chosen by the nominating committee. Of these, elected by acclamation were Dorothy Ransom, president; Pat Lupton, vice-president; and Linda Becton, treasurer.

Sheila Willis was nominated from the floor and voted to the position of secretary. It was decided that the appointment of the social, scrapbook, and program committee chairmen would be put off until next year's officers are installed.

In planning for its final social affair, the club voted, at Mr. Tarkington's invitation, to travel "down" to his cabin at Gloucester for a big hamburger fry. Various members donated charcoal burners to cook the food on and several offered their services as cooks.

The whole affair promises to be an enjoyable one—oh yes, the date this supper will take place is May 23!
