Mrs. Milton Roush Heads Group; Welfare Superintendent Speaks

Mrs. Milton Roush accepted the gavel as chairman of the Literary and Art Department of the Morehead City Woman's Club Wednesday night at the department's final meeting of the year, where the county welfare superintendent was speaker.

Mrs. Gus Davis, who has filled a two-year term, is retiring chairman. She briefly reviewed activities of the department during her term of office. This included support of the Morehead City Centennial, purchase of school lunches for underprivileged children, sponsoring of a school art contest, limiting of department membership to 66 and dinner meetings.

Mrs. Davis expressed appreciation to fellow officers for their cooperation. The department gave her a rising vote of thanks for her service.

Old Homes Tour Mrs. Charles Davis, president of the Beaufort Woman's Club, was a visitor, and announced that the club would sponsor its Old Homes Tour June 18.

Mrs. Roush showed the two winning art works in the recent art contest. The pastels were done by Jenny Lynn Garner and Barbara Roush, high school students. Mrs. Roush read a note from Miss Garner expressing thanks for the department's interest in art.

The secretary and treasurer's reports were given by Mrs. Roush, retiring secretary.

Mrs. W. C. Carlton, program chairman, introduced Miss George Hughes, speaker for the evening. Miss Hughes is welfare superintendent.

Miss Hughes pointed out that the welfare department disburses half a million dollars annually in the county. Of that amount, the county is furnishing this year $91,885.

Describes Caseworkers Commenting on welfare caseworkers, Miss Hughes said the caseworker discusses problems with people. "Her skills lie in asking pointed, searching questions that help the person understand his problem and arrive at his own solution."

To illustrate the work handled by the welfare office, Miss Hughes related a day of her activities.

'My Day' 1. First thing in the morning a doctor called to get a work permit for his teen-age child. The doctor was annoyed because a permit had to be obtained. Miss Hughes explained that giving permits was the only way the welfare department could check on whether children were being maltreated by employers.

2. Discussed with a woman "the other woman" and the husband's drunkenness. The client finally decided separation from her husband was the only solution.

3. A husband and wife called and asked for financial assistance for the woman who was to be taken to a TB sanatorium. The request was turned down because an investigation showed the family could pay the cost involved.

4. Discussed over the phone with the editor of the paper a recent editorial on the welfare department.

5. Sheriff came in with a letter from the state mental hospital. Letter said that a county man at hospital could come home but family refused to come for him, therefore, would sheriff come and get him? Miss Hughes explained that law required that welfare departments assume responsibility for such cases when the family refuses to take the patients released by a mental hospital.

6. A mother called about plans for placing her child in a boarding home. The parents agreed to give the child up and the mother agreed to state hospital care for herself.

7. Lunch. 8. Mail arrived. In it were letters from state hospital about a patient there, letter from Oxford Orphanage saying it would take two county children, letters from Chicago and Connecticut regarding care of children, and bills.

9. Conferred with caseworker about a welfare recipient who was driving a car. 10. Routine conference with caseworker.

11. Investigation of application for aid to the disabled. 12. Application from woman for aid to the disabled turned down.

13. Conference with caseworker as to aid-to-the-disabled application approved in Raleigh. 14. Juvenile judge came in and asked for an investigation on a report on mistreatment of children and had a petition for a father to adopt a teen-age child.

15. Spoke on phone with attorney relative to error in ruling on adoption.

16. Talked with David Willis, Morehead City Hospital administrator, on payment of a hospital bill.

Shows Chart Miss Hughes showed a chart which is followed in determining how much money a family is entitled to through the welfare department. Using a family of five, whose only resource is free seafood, Miss Hughes said the welfare payments to the family would be $115 a month.

In answer to questions, Miss Hughes explained adoptive procedures. She said the purpose of welfare aid is to provide persons with sufficient funds for a minimum living level. She added that the welfare department makes no check on how persons spend the money they receive.

In May of this year, the welfare department, she said, was helping 554 children. One hundred forty-seven were children who had been

Garden Club Members Attend Tea At Mrs. Loutit's Home Wednesday On Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. M. J. Loutit, incoming president of the Garden Club, entertained members of the group for tea in her home at 115 Noyes Ave. Out of thirty-four members, thirty-two of the club attended, and enjoyed one of the most novel and enjoyable meetings of the year. Mrs. George McLachlan presided at the tea table. Mrs. C. Arthur Stone and Mrs. G. D. Gamble served as a welcoming committee. Many of the guests brought flowers from their own gardens. The most notable were table decorations: (1) A grouping of roses and larkspur, and another two of exceptionally beautifully white roses, arranged by Mrs. F. C. Salisbury; (2) A second display of wild phlox, arranged by Mrs. Luther Hamilton Jr.; and (3) Two spectacular white water lilies, grown by Mrs. E. A. Council. On the rear porch of her home, Mrs. Loutit had set up a table to which other flowers were carried. There, Mrs. Frank Moran conducted a class in corsage making. Under her professional direction, many of her aptest pupils made their own corsages from a profusion of roses and other flowers brought in by members of the club. But even less expert guests carried home beautiful corsages arranged by more deft members—or by Mrs. Moran, herself. While tea was served, the guests cherished the leaves in the bottom of their cups... because, in a private room, Mrs. James Morrill was waiting to read fortunes, with her interpretations from residue of leaves in the bottom of each cup. Mrs. Morrill's predictions were sometimes humorous, but often very perceptive. Based, perhaps not entirely upon what she read in the tea-leaves; but upon what she had learned from long-standing acquaintances, and her shrewd knowledge of human nature. The cream of the party was the presence of Mrs. D. G. Bell, whom all members love for her long-time devotion to the interests of the Garden Club.
