The House of the Week
Nordic Features Influence Small, Sturdy Home Design

This sturdy home, with special appeal to budget-conscious American families, has the friendly, home-like quality characteristic of Scandinavian architecture. Stone, glass, and wood are used prominently throughout.

By JOHN O. B. WALLACE
 Inspired by the best features of modern Scandinavian architecture, this small, sturdy house should become a popularity winner with budget-conscious American families.
 Chosen as design X-14 in the House of the Week series, it reflects the simplicity and sound construction which have made Nordic home styling increasingly esteemed throughout the United States.
 Scandinavian design elements fit in well with American living, both in furniture and architectural forms. This compact house, less than 1,300 square feet in size, makes full use of the Nordic's love for clean lines and sturdy, natural materials.
 Glass, stone and wood have major roles in home construction throughout Norway, Sweden and Denmark, and Architect Alan Wood Fraser has used all three materials to advantage in design X-14.
 The glass areas are large, and simple in styling, to provide maximum light and air throughout the house.
 Vertical siding and a decorative front fence bring wood prominently into exterior facades.
Living Areas Are Open
 Stone is to be found in the random ashlar stone, interspersing the vertical siding, and in the brick chimney and the flagstone-floored rear porch.
 Two other elements found in Scandinavian homes were incorporated, too, in this design—the open planning of living areas and the privacy of sleeping areas.
 As in most Scandinavian homes, the three bedrooms utilize space

A traffic plan unusual for a small home has been achieved in this winning design for the House of the Week series. The living and sleeping areas are shown above. The basement plan, not shown, includes a 28 by 25 foot recreation room, a corner bar, and a utility room with heater, laundry and workbench areas. The basement has high, daylight windows, all of which are above grade.

Hospital Stages Successful Fish Fry
 Charles Caudell, administrator of the Sea Level Community Hospital, reported that the fish fry on the hospital grounds on the Fourth was a success in every way.
 F. C. Noyes, hospital trustee, reported yesterday morning that 626 persons were served, but more tickets than that had been purchased.
 A final accounting on the profit made is expected in about a week. The fish fry is the only money-raising event sponsored by the hospital.
 Served were fried hard-shelled crabs, shrimp, mullet, tomatoes, slaw and cornbread.
