This looks like the best 4-H club week ever. Beginning Monday, July 21, and ending Saturday, July 26, over 1,000 club members representing every section of North Carolina will meet together at North Carolina State College, Raleigh.

There are too many program highlights for me to mention them all, but here are some of the events we will enjoy: The state 4-H health pageant, the 4-H talent parade, and many important speakers, including Luther H. Hodges, governor of North Carolina.

If you would like to attend 4-H club week, the cost is $14 for the entire week. This includes insurance coverage. Each county is limited as to the number of 4-H's that may attend, but our quota is still not filled. If you would like to go and participate in this wonderful event, please contact me right away.

Camp letters have been mailed to all 4-H's. If you are a 4-H'er and did not get a letter, contact the farm or home agent's office in Beaufort. We will go to the Roanoke Island 4-H Camp at Manteo the week of Aug. 4-9.

If you are planning to go to camp with us, please send in your five dollar deposit. It should be in by the 17th as camp officials must be notified as to the number to expect from Carteret County.

Last year, about 31 or 32 boys and girls from Carteret went to Schaub 4-H Camp in the mountains. They had a wonderful time. This year we will have a wonderful time at Manteo.

You may not be able to attend 4-H club week or 4-H camp, but there is something you can and should be doing. Now is the time to work on your 4-H project. Keep a good record and keep it up-to-date. You will find it much easier if you work on it often and not wait until you have forgotten part of your information.

Col. Harry Brown Suggests State Waterways Agency

The commission on reorganization of the state government recently heard testimony from Col. Harry E. Brown, director of the state hurricane rehabilitation program, relative to establishment of a waterways commission.

Such a commission, whose major duties would be development of state waterways for navigation, was proposed more than a year ago by the All-Seashore Highway Association.

At the end of the game the hostess served lime sherbet, brownies and nut bars.

Those playing were: Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Comer, Mr. and Mrs. Solon Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Durwood Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Loecky, Mr. and Mrs. Pruitt, Mr. and Mrs. Gibbie Sanderson of Morehead City were special guests.

On Friday, July 4th, Mrs. Zora Garner, her children, grandchildren and great grandchildren had a picnic dinner in the garden at her home on Railroad St. Sharing the dinner with them were Mrs. Bessie Herrington, sister-in-law, and her daughter, Mrs. Troy S. Brown, of Norfolk, Va.

The meeting was opened with a group song and a prayer by Mrs. Nick Allen.

Mrs. Bob Jernigan presented a very interesting program about God's Word on Stewardship.

After the business session Mrs. Ned Ratliff closed with prayer.

The hostess served delicious ice cream, cookies and colas.

The Gertie Howard Circle was entertained by Mrs. James Kelly with approximately nine members present. Mrs. Letha Henderson presented the program.

Several items of old business were discussed during the business session.

At the close of the meeting, fruit jello with cream, cake and colas were served.

Mrs. Rena Edwards was hostess to the Bessie Herrington Circle Tuesday evening. There were nine members present and two visitors.

Mrs. Zeb Mauney gave an interesting program on Called to Discipleship.

The members enjoyed a social hour and the hostess served ice cream sodas, cookies and nuts.

The general assembly in 1957 enacted a law enabling establishment of such a commission.

In his testimony before the commission studying reorganization of the state government, Colonel Brown estimated that a budget of $150,000 a year will be necessary to begin development of the state's waterways.

He believes $92,889 will be available from taxes now received from the sale of maritime fuel. The remainder, $67,111, would be provided by an appropriation from the general fund. "Local political subdivisions should contribute a fair share of the cost of any waterway development project. This amount would be determined by the waterways commission and should be at least one-third of the total cost of the project," Colonel Brown said.

Colonel Brown called the commission's attention to a 1954 "Report on Survey of North Carolina Inland Ports and Waterways" by Parsons, Brinckerhoff, Hall and MacDonald. That report recommended the establishment of a waterways development fund under jurisdiction of the Department of Conservation and Development.

Colonel Brown recommended an independent waterways agency but said that the director of the Department of Conservation and Development was ready to assume that responsibility if it were believed that such would be the better plan.

Colonel Brown outlined what he thought should be long and short range plans for the waterways commission.

A waterways commission has been deemed necessary to accomplish waterways projects that have not been undertaken by the federal government. These projects would mean large amounts of revenue to the state, benefit the commercial and sports fishing industries and commercial water transportation as well as pleasure boaters, Colonel Brown pointed out.

graduate and senior undergraduates and high school biology and chemistry teachers from 12 states.

The first term of the summer session ends July 16. Enrollment for the second term, July 18-Aug. 23, will take place on the Duke campus July 7-14.

Located on Piver's Island across from Beaufort, the laboratory is in an area particularly well suited for the study of marine flora and fauna because of its geographical location midway between the tropical climate of Florida and the Caribbean and the colder waters of New England and Canada.

During his tour of duty in Cleveland (1950) he married Miss Elizabeth Lundberg. They have two children now, Patrick Michael, 3, and Maura Bridget, 8 months.

Article by News-Times Editor Appears in Nieman Reports

An article by Miss Ruth Peeling, editor of THE NEWS-TIMES, appears in the July issue of Nieman Reports, a quarterly magazine published by newspaper alumni who have held Nieman Fellowships at Harvard University.

The article, titled Education Among Weekly Staffs, is based on a survey made by the author of North Carolina's weekly newspapers.

The survey showed that 50 per cent of the writers on the state's weeklies hold a bachelor's degree, 6.8 per cent a master's degree and 5 per cent a doctorate.

Of the remainder, 41.7 per cent completed high school and many of those have some college training, but did not complete requirements for a degree. Less than 1 per cent completed no more than the eighth grade.

Miss Peeling concluded, in her article, that North Carolina weekly newspapers are "holding their own" in vying with larger newspapers for college-trained personnel, adding that weekly newspaper editors should do more to make their readers aware that their staffs are competently trained.

Too many readers, she commented, can be found apologizing for their "hometown paper".

The article concludes, "The fact that a person has a college degree does not mean that he is, by virtue of that degree, an outstanding journalist. Knowledge of the education level of editorial staffers can serve as a yardstick, however, to help evaluate the quality of the weekly press."

Miss Peeling is a graduate of Syracuse University School of Journalism and received her master's degree in journalism at Florida State University. The other member of THE NEWS-TIMES news writing staff, Bob Seymour, is a graduate of Oglethorpe University, Atlanta, Ga.

Miss Ellen Bordeaux, women's news editor, is a graduate of Morehead City High School.

Dr. Bookhout Speaks to Men's Club at Newport

The Men's Club of St. James Methodist Church, Newport, met last Thursday night to hear Dr. C. G. Bookhout, director of the Duke Marine Laboratory, Beaufort. Dr. Bookhout was introduced as an eminent Marine biologist, but claimed rather that he was an invertebrate zoologist, or "a scientist with no backbone".

Dr. Bookhout received his PhD degree from Duke, is a church leader and youth counselor.

The importance of the sea is not realized, Dr. Bookhout explained, emphasizing that 71 per cent of the surface of the earth is composed of salt water. Oceanography, or the study of the oceans and the life forms therein, is comparatively new.

Navigational needs brought about the first ocean studies, and in later years the economic importance of fisheries prompted more intensive research, he added.

"Fascinating Problems"
Some of the many fascinating problems of sea life were mentioned. How do eels, salmon, herring, and menhaden return to their original locations—or how do the offspring return to the original location of their parents, a journey which sometimes takes as long as three years? Temperature and salinity gradients have been used to explain this phenomenon, but not completely.

There is a great need for chemical oceanographers to study microscopic life for this is the basic food for all organisms of the sea, Dr. Bookhout said. Another important future aspect of microscopic marine plants is that one acre of them has more than five times the food content of an acre of land plants.

The importance of the sea in feeding the teeming billions of the world must not be overlooked, the speaker continued. Some of the other problems involved with ocean life is the danger of increasing radioactivity by dumping of radioactive waste materials into the oceans.

Dr. Bookhout explained that the first marine laboratory was founded in Beaufort 75 years ago by John Hopkins University. The area is rich in marine life. Present research involves many projects including the use of isotopes to determine the "food chain" of various animals.

One interesting problem is how do marine birds live off of salt water? It has been determined that glands of the bird secrete an amount of salt out of the water after water is consumed.

The Duke Marine Laboratory rates high in national circles, for over 75 per cent of the graduate students attending are from institutions other than Duke.

Guests Attend
Other guests attending the meeting included John Slaughter, a guest of C. E. Millis, and Bob Turpin, a State College student, E. W. Chappell of Camp Glenn, and the Rev. Virgil N. Moore of Camp Glenn - Broad Creek Methodist churches, who conducted the musical portion of the program.

Boy Scout Carl Pruitt of Troop 61, sponsored by the club, received merit badges from Maj. Harry Livingston, advancement chairman. Outgoing president Allen Elliott, welcomed the Rev. Ralph Fleming Jr., back to Newport. The Rev. Fleming was returned by the conference to Newport for his third year.

Officers taking office for the ensuing year are Dick Loecky, president; H. J. Gillikin, vice-president; Milton Gould, secretary; Claude Foy, treasurer; membership committee chairman, John Lilly; attendance, Gerald Merrill; program, Wrenn Lawrence; projects, Raymond Edwards, and devotions, Ted Christopherson.
