Oertel is a stirring tale of young Davy Jones of Beaufort, who having run away to sea, is captured with the boat crew by Blackbeard. He became an unwilling member of the pirate boat. Before his escape, he has an adventure of piracy and lost treasures.

Ruth Carrol, who has written a number of juvenile stories using a character, Beane and his dog, Tough Enough, places the scene of one of her stories, "Tough Enough's Pony" on Shackleford Banks. The dog discovers a sick banks pony, later named Sassy Boy, in a cedar thicket. The whole family joins in saving the sick pony.

Although Carteret County has never produced a native author of fiction, yet it enjoys the distinction of being among the few counties to have seven story writers use it as the locale of their novels.

More than half a million acres in New Mexico have been preserved as Wilderness Areas to protect wildlife and vegetation. These areas may be reached only on foot or horseback.
