Eugene Gaskills Honored At Anniversary Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Glenn Gaskill entertained at a dinner party Christmas Eve at their home honoring his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Gaskill of Sea Level, who were observing their golden wedding anniversary.

The table was beautifully arranged with a centerpiece of five white tapers in crystal and gold candelabras and a decorative Christmas arrangement of red and white. A linen cloth edged in lace covered the table.

Other Christmas arrangements for the home were white candles at the windows, a mantel arrangement of graduated red tapers and smilax, and a Christmas tree decorated in blue.

The dinner consisted of lime-meringue salad, baked ham, string beans, candied yams, cranberry-glazed rolls, ambrosia, fruit cake and coffee.

The hosts presented Mrs. Gaskill with a dozen yellow roses. Dinner guests were Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Fulcher of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Gaskill of Norfolk, Mr. Eugene L. Gaskill of Fayetteville and Mrs. K. R. Mason and Mrs. Lottie Mason of Thomasville.

1958 Visitors to Hatteras Park Show Increase Over Previous Year

By AYCOCK BROWN

Manteo, N. C.—America's first publicly-owned national seashore attracted almost 100,000 persons during July, an increase of approximately 11 per cent over the same month in 1957, reports Robert F. Gibbs, superintendent.

During July, according to the official count, 99,330 in 28,252 automobiles entered the recreational area which begins in lower Nags Head and extends southward along the Outer Banks to Ocracoke Inlet, including Ocracoke and Hatteras Islands.

During the same period 18,537 persons chafed up a total of 117,867 visitor days on the various campsites in the area. This is a tremendous increase in the number of persons using the camping facilities, which are located at Bodie Island near Oregon Inlet, the northern tip of Hatteras Island on the south shore of Oregon Inlet, at Cape Hatteras and also on Ocracoke.

available, including parking areas, rest room facilities and cold water shower baths at comfort stations. Other modes of travel to Cape Hatteras National Seashore during the month included 262 persons by bus, 15 by airplane and 171 aboard boats. Calendar year total for visitors to the recreational area during 1958 is now 173,568 and the total number of campers through July, 37,045 persons.

Other National Park Service facilities on the Dare Coast showed a decrease in July 1958 as compared to the same month in 1957. Fort Raleigh National Historic Site had 25,780 visitors during the month, a 15.8 per cent decrease over July 1957. Almost 50,000 persons visited the historic site where The Lost Colony is presented during the summer months, since Jan. 1, 1958.

Biggest decrease in visitation was reported from Wright Brothers National Monument. According to Superintendent Horace A. Dough, of the National Memorial at Kill Devil Hills, attendance during July 1958 totaled 52,954 as compared to 63,751 for July 1957. "This," he reported, "showed a 17 per cent decrease over July 1957."

Craftsman Carves Model Of Early American Room

Glen Gardner, N. J. (AP) — Here's how thorough T. Herbert Hand is: When he made a model of an early American room measuring 18 by 24 inches and complete with hand carved colonial furniture, he blackened the wall of the stone fireplace for realism.

Motorist Says Friend Worth More Than Fine

Bristol, Va. (AP)—A motorist paying an overtime parking ticket left this note for police: "A friend stopped me to talk. I should make him pay this, but I'd rather keep my friends. They are worth a dollar."

An interesting place to visit is Shakerstown, Ky., which was founded by the "Shakers" or, as they were first known, the United Society of Believers.

Designer Puts Beauty in Phones, Typewriters, Pens, Home Fixtures

By NORRIS LEAR Of the Los Angeles Times

Los Angeles (AP)—Henry Dreyfuss is a designing man who at 54 can hardly enter a home, an office or walk down the street of any city without seeing something of his work.

He is the man who designed your telephone and quite likely your bathroom fixtures, your typewriter, your pen, your clock, your sewing machine, your TV, your air conditioner or any of a dozen other of your possessions.

One of the world's top industrial designers, he will tell you he got where he is by being a perfectionist, by having in his youth a little more than his share of brashness, and by marrying a woman with a flair for business.

He tells with a quirk of pride the time when at 17 he defied common sense and launched himself into the world of arts.

Perfection Denied
Graduating from a private school in New York with perfect grades in art, he had already won a college scholarship. However, when he took the New York regents examination his work came back graded 99 per cent and bearing the notation, "No one is perfect."

That enraged him so that he abandoned the scholarship. Instead he got a job as a theatrical designer and skipped college.

Dreyfuss' youthful brashness got him his second job. He was 18 and took a girl to a movie show, where the setting for the stage show was of execrable design.

He wrote as much to the manager. Back came an answer that if he thought he could do better, come in and do it.

He did, and for each of the following 250 weeks he designed a different stage setting for the Strand Theatre. He also began designing for plays and musicals.

Henry Dreyfuss ... puts art to work

Tired at 23
But at 23 he quit and went to Europe.

"I was tired and there wasn't enough money in it," he said. Besides, he had a dream. He had been looking around the world he lived in and had seen it filled with things shaped for utility. Often they were downright ugly.

He thought something should be done about it. When he returned to New York, he decided to try.

He rented an office, hung up a shingle as an "industrial designer," and hired a secretary, Doris Marks, a slim brunette, soft of voice and a Vassar graduate in psychology.

Dreyfuss was 25 and in business in a brand new field just in time to find that his world had been paralyzed by the Black Thursday crash.

"I might as well quit," he told Miss Marks.

She disagreed. "What have you got to lose?" she asked. The question proved valid, for he had nowhere to go but up.

But at first the motion was all but imperceptible.

Finally he found what he was looking for, a product he could design from the inside out rather than simply dressing up a manufacturer's mistakes.

Formula for Success
It was the telephone.

Dreyfuss has had the account ever since. Today this country uses 50 million telephones of his design.

That opened the floodgates. The list of ways in which he has changed the American scene could go into the hundreds, and possibly the thousands.

His success lies, in something more than cleverness with line and eagerness to find new and better materials. It is in his zeal for perfection, in finding exactly the right answer to a problem through endless studies.

Dreyfuss gives much of the credit for his own success to the woman he hired, the former Doris Marks. They were married two years after she became his secretary.

"From the start," he said "she organized things. I never would have stayed in business without her."
