

Beloved Infidel Starts Today in Morehead City

By O. J. MORROW
Theatre Manager

It will probably be years before the screen sees another love story as powerful as the one told by Sheila Graham in her autobiographical book, Beloved Infidel, now a Cinemascope, Deluxe color film starting today at the Morehead theatre.

While the book is Miss Graham's life story, it deals largely with her association with the late novelist, F. Scott Fitzgerald.

The production has Gregory Peck in the starring role of Fitzgerald, Deborah Kerr as the Hollywood columnist, Sheila Graham, and Eddie Albert as a devoted friend of the pair.

Miss Graham's book deals not with the dynamic and popular novelist of the '20's but the fading genius of a once great man in the late '30's and early '40's. This is a dramatic story of two mature people deeply in love. Miss Graham, who was engaged to a titled English nobleman when she met Fitzgerald, gave up everything to be near him.

Producer Jerry Wald has tried to stick as closely as possible to the original, shooting on actual locations in the book and calling on the memories of all the people who knew the great author.

The old Garden of Allah, where Fitzgerald spent most of his time while in Hollywood was to be used as a location for the filming, but plans were made to tear the building down. The owners, however, said they would allow Wald and King to use the building for location shots. However Wald and King were afraid that if retakes were necessary, the structure would no longer be standing.

Playing for one day only at the Morehead theatre is a picture that is being returned by popular demand. So many people have expressed their desire to see again Tammy and the Bachelor, starring Debbie Reynolds, that the Morehead is bringing it back.

Starting Thursday and playing through Saturday is Edge of Eternity, starring Cornell Wilde and Virginia Shaw.

From the moment it takes off with the force that follows a successful count-down at a launching pad, Five Gates to Hell, a Cinemascope production opening Sunday at the City theatre, explodes with drama, action and suspense. Combining a tropical story, fine performances, forceful direction and magnificent photography, it comes forth as far more than a so-called "action film."

Neville Brand, combining great force with subtlety, enacts the role of Chen Pamok, leader of a guerrilla band, who swoops down upon a field hospital headed by an American doctor convincingly played by Ken Scott. Scott, his assistant (John Marley) and the nurses operating the hospital are kidnapped and taken to the fortress where the war lord lies critically ill and in need of medical care. In their plot to escape the brutality of their captors, the nurses rise to heights of great value.

With Five Gates to Hell, a really all-around entertainment package is offered motion picture fans of all ages.

Playing Wednesday and Thursday at the City theatre is The House of Intrigue, starring Dann Adams and Curt Jurgens.

Ending up the week at the City theatre is a double feature, Man of the Gun, with Robert Mitchum and also The Miracle of the Hills, starring Rex Reason.
