

State College Will Conduct Pesticide School

With the recent cranberry situation fresh on their minds, dealers who sell pesticides to the consumer, agricultural leaders and representatives of the pesticide industry will be attending the 12th Annual Pesticide School on the State College campus Jan. 13 and 14, 1960.

R. M. Williams, county agricultural agent, says that farmers, nurserymen, gardeners, warrenhousemen, housewives and others are compelled to control certain plant diseases, insects, weeds and rodents. If successful protection from these pests is to be accomplished they need to know what chemical to use and how to use it for best results.

How readily available are the best pesticides for specific jobs and whether or not they are used to the best advantage often depends upon how up-to-date a dealer is on such materials. Dealers who "hand materials across the counter" to the consumer are constantly confronted with the job of supplying pesticides that will do the job and that will also meet standards of public health and safety, Mr. Williams continued.

"Therefore, dealers, as well as agricultural workers and industrial workers should avail themselves of every opportunity to keep informed on recommended pesticides and their judicious use so as to promote better and safer pest control and help prevent 'cranberry situations,'" Mr. Williams commented.

The pesticide school is held annually at State College. Latest research findings and reviews of current problems in the field of pesticides and application equipment are stressed. During the opening session of the 1960 school, Wednesday morning, Jan. 13, the featured guest speaker, Dr. Emol A. Fails will present an address titled, "How Do You Sell Your Product?"

This presentation by a nationally recognized economist and orator will involve many implications of special interest to local dealers who handle pesticides, the county agent said.

Current research and other information will be reviewed in the following sections: Weed Control Section, 10 a.m.-12 noon Wednesday, Jan. 13; insect control, Wednesday afternoon; plant diseases and rodent control, Thursday morning, Jan. 14.

The North Carolina Pesticide Manual is published by State College, Division of College Extension, in conjunction with the pesticide school each year. This manual is designed to give those attending the school, as well as others, the most up-to-date information available on the selection and proper use of pesticides in North Carolina.

Each registrant at the school receives a copy of this manual. Following the school, copies are available from the Division of College Extension at a nominal fee.

Dealers, farm supervisors, formulators, agricultural leaders and others wishing to attend the 1960 pesticide school may receive advanced registration blanks by writing directly to Division of College Extension, Box 5125, Raleigh, N. C., or they may register Jan. 13, 1960, upon arrival in the lobby of the State College Union Building.

Marines Request Waterway Closing For Three Days

The commanding general, Marine Corps Base, Camp Lejeune, has requested authority to close the Atlantic intracoastal waterway to navigation between New River Inlet and Bear Inlet from 6 a.m., EST, Tuesday, March 29 through 4 p.m., EST, Thursday, March 31, 1960.

Planned amphibious landing operations consisting of heavy vehicle traffic and various type bridge installations will require that the waterway be closed continuously to navigation during the above period.

Objections, if any, to closure of this section of the waterway should be submitted to the Wilmington Corps of Engineers office on or before January 18, 1960.

Modern Italy became a reality in 1860 when King Victor Emmanuel I unified several Italian states.
