County Potato Growers Plan Spring Planting

By R. M. WILLIAMS
County Agricultural Agent

County potato growers are now making plans for spring planting of potatoes. The latest farm report indicates that there will be 20,500 acres of late spring potatoes planted in eastern North Carolina.

This estimate is 2 per cent above last year's harvest acreage. Approximately two-thirds of this acreage will be planted in the north-eastern area which includes Carteret. The state of California, which is our largest late spring producing state, plans to plant 51,000 acres which is approximately 13 per cent more than last year's planting.

The efforts put forth through our National Potato Council are beginning to pay off. Some of our magazines with nation-wide coverage are carrying news articles of the real food value of Irish potatoes in the daily diet.

Another prize vegetable which is grown in most every home garden, as well as commercially in this county, is the tomato. The first people to recognize the tomato in the family diet were the Italians. Thomas Jefferson was the first person in this country to grow tomatoes.

The use of tomatoes in the family diet has grown until at the present time it is rated among the top five vegetables grown in this country and the second largest vegetable crop in total acreage produced in the United States.

Tomatoes are one of our most tasty vegetables and can be prepared in the family diet in so many ways. They are low in calories and high in vitamins A and C.

Nutrition authorities report that often our diets are deficient in vitamin C and A. One medium-size raw tomato provides one-half of the vitamin C and A recommended in the daily diet. The per capita consumption of tomatoes is about thirty pounds of fresh and canned tomatoes, plus another ten pounds of canned tomato products. Tomatoes and tomato products head the list of vegetables for processing.

The Homestead, Rutgers, Big Boy, Valiant, and Manalucia are the five tomato varieties that are recommended for this area.

The Homestead, Rutgers and Manalucia are considered the most popular commercial varieties. The latter variety is considered very good for late stake vine-ripe tomatoes. The Big Boy and Valiant are considered good home grown varieties for the family garden. These two varieties are not resistant to fusarium wilt.

The Valiant variety will produce approximately two weeks earlier than the other varieties. I have been planting the Valiant in my garden for several years. When staked, pruned and mulched, I find this variety will bear two crops of fruit which will bear up until attacked by frost.
