A Horrible Death.

One night recently while several drummers were sitting in the Montezuma hotel, Captain John Knight entered, looking as sad as a yawning grave. He hadn't much to say. He is usually as chipper as a sparrow; but all that had vanished, and he seemed to be chewing his cigar a little harder than usual, and switching it from right to left, and from left to right more frequently than usual. Finally Mr. Williams made bold to inquire:

"What's the matter Knight?
You seem to be in trouble."
"Just heard of the horrible death of Toland Vincar."
"Friend of yours?" asked Williams.

"Nope; just a chaman in Chi-ago."
"Owe you anything?" queried
Williams.

"Nope."
"Have a vote in the primaries?"
was the thoughtful inquiry of W.
E. King.

"Nope."
"Witness in some of the bootlegging cases, maybe," suggested Guy V. Roberts.

"No sir."
"Well then, what are you so cut up about?" asked Williams.
"Oh he died such a horrible death. It was simply awful. I never heard of anything like it!"

"How was that?" asked half a dozen interested individuals in chorus.
"Well, he was at work on the roof of the Masonic Temple, and —he got too close to the edge—and slipped off."
Thinking of his sheer drop of twenty-one stories, an apparent shudder swept over the assemblage and as the interest became intense the man of sorrow continued, his eyes filling with tears and his voice choked with grief:
"Oh, but the long fall wasn't the worst of it. The poor-fellow had on his rubber boot-boots."

"Yes," said King.
"And he bounced up and du-down for three days and nights, and they had to shoot him to keep him from starving to death."

Avoid The Blues.

There are a lot of people in this world who seem to take a scindish delight in being miserable.
Some men, and some women, too, surround themselves with an atmosphere of gloom that eternal sunshine couldn't dispel, and though this distorting medium molehills grow to mountains and there are tears and groans where there should be smiles.

They wake up in the morning with a face that looks like a sodden doughnut, aid perhaps the sun is bright and the birds are singing. They will grumble and say, "Oh, well, this won't last; we'll have bad weather yet before night." And, should the sky grow clouded and a refreshing rain moisten the thirsty earth, they shout in glee, "I told you so!"

When they sit down to breakfast they almost sour the cream they put in their coffee, and the most tempting breakfast does them about as much good as a carpet sack sandwich would.
They grow dyspeptic, morose, pessimistic, cynical, hypocond-riacal. If they were four-footed animals their ears would be down and their tails between their hind legs.

If you ever get to feeling blue about things stop and think what it will mean if you keep it up, and then pin your mind so hard on your daily task that there isn't room for another thing in your head. That's the way to keep the haunting spirit of pessimism and despondency out of your heart.

And remember the world has not time to listen to your troubles for everyone has troubles of his own, and the chances are that a good many have a great deal heavier burden to bear than you have.—Staff.

According to rumor, Gov.
Whitman of New York has declined to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for president. He has been in conference recently with Republican state leaders in New York and has received assurances that the organization will support him.
