BURNSVILLE— "So They Say"

The weather: Perfect for tobacco—warm and rainy so that farmers can get the crop ready and to market.

About town: One of luckiest deer hunters of season—Walter Williams who got two fine bucks—one an 8 point and one a 9 point! That will turn some of these others green with enff. Of course, there's always another season. . . . Bill Banks out to Jefferson Barracks, Mo. to begin air corps training, and about first person he met was "Speedy" Bostian who's there for training too! . . . Christmas card from M. Sgt. Jenny Proffitt at Fort Sill, Okla. . . . Frank H. Watson accepted for Merchant Marine. Will be home for few days. . . and sorry to learn that Ray Hilliard is ill of malaria, Dover, Del. where he is stationed. . . . New arrival: Joe and Irene Boone Russel's daughter out in California. . . Sorry to hear this morning that "Uncle Fatty" Honeycutt who has been ill for several days is no better. . . Christmas card today from Pfc. M. L. Bailey whose address is Postmaster, San Francisco, wishing folks back home a good Christmas season. . . . We can't keep up with all the ball games (Please, school reporters, send in your school games) but the All Stars won a thrilling victory over the Mars Hill All Stars on Monday night. One version "we had two sailors and they had three soldiers" on the teams. . . . (Does that prove anything, we wonder?) . . . The sailors were two ex-high school champions, James King and R. G. Fender. . . Gus Fender is doing a swell job as referee. . . . A woman we know is credited with writing a complaint to the Post Office department. . . The mails are too fast! She sent a Christmas fruit cake to her son in Sicily and he ate it before Hallowe'en! We'll bet it tasted just as good, and that was a better arrangement than eating it about Valentine Day! . . . Remember: you can't send a box overseas but you can make a boy in camp over here happy—and greetings may be sent to all. . . Some of the cleverest we've seen are the V-mail sketches, in case you can draw.

Mrs. George Davis of Morristown, Tenn. is the guest of Mrs. Bruce Westall.

SOCIAL SECURITY

number. If he fails to show this number to each employer for whom he works, he might eventually lose some of the benefits to which he is entitled. For unless the employer knows the number, he can not include it in his wage report to the government.

Each wage earner's account is set up and kept for him by the social security board which will also handle his claim for benefits when the time comes. The social security board receives the wage records from the Bureau of Internal Revenue which in turn receives them from the employer. Every quarter—that is four times a year—the employer furnishes a complete record showing the name, social security number and amount of wages paid to each person on the payroll, at any time during the three months for which he is reporting (no matter how short a time the man worked or how little pay he received).

The employer's reports show also how much he deducted from each man's pay for social security taxes and how much payroll tax the employer himself pays.

These wages and tax reports are collected and audited by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The audit shows whether or not the wages the employer reports and the tax money he turns in, agree. Then the wage reports go to the social security board, where the Bureau of old-age and survivors insurance credits each item of wages to the social security account of the worker who receives that pay.
