OUR TOWN
(Formerly, "The Mayor's Column")

The comments we have received on the few "Mayor's Columns" that have appeared to date have varied widely, ranging from questions and requests for further information to suggestions for future columns. One thing stands out from the comments—that a good many people appreciate being informed about the town's affairs. One suggestion was a new name for the column, which we liked so well that we have forthwith adopted it. The former title, we feel, associated this column to particular office. The problems we discuss here are the town's problems, not just the mayor's problems. If Burnsville is to progress as it should, its problems must not simply be dumped into the lap of the mayor and the town board. A broader participation is needed. All of us—not just the town board—should be given time, thought, and effort toward improving our community. Hence "Our Town" seems better to express what we are trying to achieve in this column than the heading we started with. Last week we discussed the importance of attracting industry. By concentrating on that we certainly did not mean to imply that we believe this to be our sole big problem. The struggle to improve the economics of Western North Carolina is recognized by all authorities to be a three-pronged attack: (1) Attraction and expansion of industry, (2) further development of the tourist business, including the attraction of retired people to live here, and (3) increase in agricultural income. The last is largely outside the bailiwick of this column, but the first two are of such paramount importance to Burnsville that we will from time to time have much to say about both.

It's in the cards

Studio greeting cards are tailor-made for those who like to "keep in touch," yet don't have the time to write letters. A few words and an illustration oftentimes can put across a message or thought much better than a long note. There is a card which shows an elegant dowager sipping tea in her drawing room, for example, with the cover message: "Just sitting here thinking of you." Inside, large brush type makes a complete turnabout: "How the Hell are you, anyway?"

Another card from the same publisher, Rust Craft, has a miniature plastic dust pan on the cover. Inside: "Any dirt?" And for those who never have anything to say, but want to keep in touch, there is an appropriate card which says: "It's nice having a friend like you... who else could I send these nutty cards to?"

Man in Service

BRUNSWICK, Maine (EHTNC)—Serving with Patrol Squadron 26, operating out of the Naval Air Station, Brunswick, Maine, is Charles R. Ray, aviation structural mechanic second class, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Ray of Route 2, Box 116, Burnsville, N. C. The squadron, which flies Lockheed "Neptune" aircraft, is deployed to the North Atlantic and Mediterranean, fulfilling vital anti-submarine missions to help maintain the Free World's control of the seas.

Hidden Treasure Hamburgers

Let's talk big... about hamburgers. Giant, deluxe, dinner-sized hamburgers... deftly seasoned—with a surprise tucked inside. They're tender, juicy and lush... everybody's choice. Above all be generous, make them large and thick.

For "Hidden Treasure Hamburgers", crisp canned French fried onions and pickle relish can be tucked between two beef patties. Then, cook over charcoal, in the broiler, or pan-broil on top of the stove. They'll take from 15 to 18 minutes.

1 1/2 pounds ground beef
2 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon ground pepper
1/2 teaspoon monosodium glutamate (Accent), optional

1 can O & C French Fried Onions
6 teaspoons pickle relish

Combine beef, salt, pepper and Accent. Form 12 thin, round patties, about 4 inches in diameter. Place a generous amount of O & C French Fried Onions and a teaspoon of pickle relish on top of each of 6 patties and cover with remaining patties, pressing edges together to seal. Broil over charcoal.

Tip: If broiling hamburgers over charcoal, a flat wire toaster is convenient. It makes turning easier and prevents squashing of burgers. Serve any left-over French fried onions with the meal... nice to have a few extra cans on hand. They make wonderful snacks to nibble on while the food is being cooked.

SAVORY POTATO STICKS

2 cans O & C Potato Sticks (about 6 servings)
Heat potato sticks in aluminum foil pan on edge of grill or in oven. Sprinkle with any of the following just before serving.

- Seasoned salts—garlic, celery, onion, etc.
- Powdered herbs—parsley, basil, oregano
- Grated parmesan cheese
