

Workshop To Be Held

Over 500 music and classroom teachers will be singing, dancing, and playing musical instruments this summer in an effort to learn new methods of teaching music. The State Education Agency is offering classroom teachers across the state an opportunity to participate in a series of 8-day workshops set up in twelve locations.

On June 14-23 a workshop will be held at East Yancey High School in Burnsville for teachers of Elementary Schools K-8. Consultant for that workshop, which will run each day from 8:30 to 12:30, will be Miss Sandra Starnes of Greensboro. Ruth Jewell, Music consultant for the State Education Agency, is in charge of the statewide workshop series.

According to James Hall, Cultural Arts Director for the State Education Agency, the purpose of the workshops is to involve teachers in musical experiences. They will not only learn new methods of teaching music, but it is hoped they will also gain a better appreciation of the musical experiences they can offer their pupils, added Hall.

The workshop series, noted State Superintendent A. Craig Phillips, is part of a continuing effort to increase the cultural arts program in Tar Heel schools.

REPRESENTING YANCEY—Among the 250 delegates to the 16th annual 4-H Regional Resource Development Conference at Fontana Village, N.C. were two from Yancey County. 34 boys and girls from North Carolina attended the week long event which drew 4-H'ers from the seven states in the Tennessee Valley. Yancey County's delegates are (left to right) Mike Hopson, John Blair, Agricultural Extension Agent, and Kay Honeycutt.

Special Lions Club Program

Leo Simpson Jr., manager of the Kentown Corporation at Barnardville, will be the guest speaker at the annual installation of officers and ladies night of the Burnsville Lions Club, Thursday night, June 10.

Leo Simpson is a member of the Beaverdam Lions Club at Asheville and has presented programs to many clubs. A feature of the program will be a style show with Yancey County employees of Kentown modeling hot pants, pant suits, and dresses made by the company.

All Lions are urged to be present and invite a friend who is interested in becoming a Lion. Reservations should be made by calling Ed Hunter, Jr.
