

Profiles Of Democratic Candidates For School Board

Nick Galifianakis
For the U.S. Senate

North Carolina can't afford an investment in the past.

Let's send Nick to the Senate. It's our future.

When Congressman Nick Galifianakis announced his intention to run for the United States Senate, he offered a profound reason why we should elect him to this important position.

"The fundamental issue in the 1972 election," he said, "is which among us is better equipped to move forward with our people during these rapidly changing times, for twentieth century problems must be met with twentieth century solutions."

Nick Galifianakis is a young man seasoned by 12 years of experience in Congress and the State Legislature. His leadership looks to the future, not the past.

His 75-year old opponent has asked for "just one more term" because of his seniority. But North Carolina can't afford an investment in the past.

If we're serious about wanting seniority in the U.S. Senate, we must make an investment now in leadership that can solve our problems today and in the years ahead.

We must elect Nick Galifianakis to the U.S. Senate.

Sanford Makes New Appeal

When Terry Sanford was elected governor in 1960, Yancey County gave him one of the largest majorities it had ever accorded a candidate for state office. Now Sanford, vigorously campaigning in Saturday's Democratic primary, is again appealing to the North Carolina electorate.

He says: "For the first time in more than a hundred years, a man from North Carolina has a chance to be president. With your help and a little luck, I can do it."

Sanford's candidacy is, of course, based on the possibility that a divided and deadlocked Democratic convention in Miami in July may turn to him as an outstanding and eminently suitable compromise, dark horse candidate.

Terry Sanford, now the president of Duke University, is 54 years old, born and raised in North Carolina, graduate of UNC law school, World War II paratrooper, wartime special agent of the FBI, and between 1961 and 1965 generally recognized as an outstanding governor of the state.

He devoted himself energetically to raising the level of public school education, and gave important support to establishing the state's system of community colleges.

If the remote chance that he receives the nomination is realized, it will be an achievement of which North Carolina may take great satisfaction.

Gillespie is self-employed as pharmacist at Pollard Drug Store.

He is chairman of the Board of Higgins Memorial Methodist Church and a Sunday School teacher. He is presently the Director of the Chamber of Commerce and a former president of that organization. He has also served as president of the Burnsville Men's Club, on the County Board of Health, on the Board of Directors of the Northwestern Bank, and is a past chairman of the Board of Elections for Yancey County.

Open Letter

Dear Yancey Republicans
Just a note to thank you for your past support. Yancey County being a neighbor to my own Watauga County, I have been in and out of your county so often, it's almost like home.

We have worked together successfully for some eight years and I need your help at this time. Your vote in the May 6th primary will help me get to Raleigh where I look forward to working with you for another four years.

Together, we can make North Carolina the finest state in the nation.

Again, my thanks for your past support and your vote on May 6.

Sincerely,
Jim Holshouser
