Public Meeting

Del W. Thomsen, Forest Supervisor of the National Forests in North Carolina, announced today that Forest Service interdisciplinary team specialists have completed compiling data for the Wilson Creek drainage on the Pisgah National Forest, and a public hearing session is scheduled for December 5 at 7:30 p. m. in Western Piedmont College Auditorium, Morganton, North Carolina.

Continuing his remarks, Thomsen explained that during the past few years interest in the management of rationally-owned lands has increased greatly over the country, and here in Appalachia it has been expressed by organizations and individuals.

Last December, the Forest Service set up unit planning as a new land-use planning process. It has been adopted for use in 13 National Forests in the Appalachian Mountains. Specific land-use plans will be made for units of National Forest land varying in size from 10,000 to 40,000 acres.

The Wilson Creek Unit will be the second such area to be presented to the public asking for additional data, facts, or specific management proposals on the future use of the National Forest lands in the Wilson Creek drainage of the Pisgah National Forest.
